300 NAZI PLANES BEATEN OFF IN BIG BATTLE EAST OF LONDON; 42 RAIDERS REPORTED DOWNED

30 DRAFT BOARDS PLANNED FOR CITY, AND TWO BODIES TO HEAR APPEALS

Officials in Charge of Conscription in Missouri Consider Splitting 13th and 24th Wards Because of Large Populations.

COUNTY IS TO HAVE 9 INDUCTION BODIES

No Plan for Central State Appeal Setup — Estimates of Number of Missouri Eligibles Vary From 432,000 to 532,000.

Increase of the number of ward draft boards i.. St. Louis from 28 to 30 is being considered by officials in charge of the conscription machinery for Missouri, because of the heavy population of two wards.

They propose to split the Twenty-fourth Ward, in the southwestern part of the city, and the Thirteenth Ward, in the southern end, into two sections each. Population of the Twenty-fourth is estimated at 75,000 and of the Thirteenth at 58,000. The draft plan seeks to limit population under a single board to 30,000.

Seven appeal boards will be set up throughout the State, including two for St. Louis and St. Louis County, to hear appeals from ward boards on claims for exemption from the draft or for deferred status.

One of these boards will handle appeals of men residing east of Kingshighway; another will deal with those arising in the rest of the city and all of St. Louis County. A third such board will handle Jackson County (Kansas City). The other four will be set up for districts covering the remainder of the State, the boundaries of which have not been announced. It is possible these four will travel on circuits to hear appeals.

There is no plan for a central state appeal board to hear further appeals, which, therefore, would go direct to the President, under the law.

Lottery Only First Step.

After the nation-wide registration Oct. 16 of all men of the age of 21 through 35, the lottery to be held at Washington will be only the first step in choosing men for military or naval service. The order of serial numbers drawn in the lottery will determine merely

PHONE RINGING DRIVE FOR AID TO BRITAIN MAY EXTEND TO ENTIRE NATION

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.

THE forthcoming New York telephone campaign by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies will doubtless be extended to cover the entire country, women leaders of the committee said yesterday. Women volunteers on Tuesday will start calling the 735,488 residential telephones in New York, urging housewives to wire Senators and Representatives to demand more aid for England immediately.

Seventy section leaders of the Manhattan Women's Division, whose chairman is Mrs. Harold V. Milligan, met yesterday afternoon at Hotel Astor. Mrs. Grace Allen Bangs, acting city chairman, said that the theme of the drive was a call for "Minute Americans."

ROOSEVELT ORDER ON CONSCRIPTION RULES IS AWAITED

First Two of Six Volumes of Regulations Likely to Be Put in Force Tomorrow by President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Action to clear the way for operation of the conscription program commanded first attention today as President Roosevelt returned to the capital and Congress made ready to resume sessions.

Before the United States can start the peacetime undertaking which begins with the registration of 16,500,000 men on Oct. 16, three essential preliminaries required disposition:

1. President Roosevelt must promulgate the regulations governing the administration of the draft machinery, enrollment, classification and selection of trainees, their induction into service and kindred matters.

2. The director of the selective service system must be appointed by Roosevelt and confirmed by the Senate as provided in the conscription law.

3. Congress must take action on the pending two billion dollar special defense appropriation request, which is to defray the expenses of registration and conscription.

Roosevelt's Next Step.

The President was expected to order into effect, possibly tomorrow, the first two of six volumes of regulations already prepared to cover all phases of the draft program. These first two sections define the nature and administrative procedure of the national and state organizations which will handle the registration, and also set forth the rules for enrollment.

Roosevelt, who has been absent attending the funeral of Speaker Bankhead in Alabama, was expected to announce his choice in a few days for the position of draft director.

The House of Representatives, in recess for three days because of the death of Speaker Bankhead, already has the conscription financing appropriation on committee calendar, and committee consideration will start tomorrow.

Possibilities for Draft Chief.

Washington's most-talked-of possibility for the draft director post is Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis B. Hershey, who has been virtually a career man in conscription. He is the executive officer of the joint army and navy Selective Service Committee, which has been engaged for 14 years on draft plans, preparations and training.

Two other names to figure in speculation are those of Col. Louis A. Johnson, recently resigned as Assistant Secretary of War, and Major-General Allen W. Gullion. Johnson, who was reported recent-

AXIS CONFERENCE ON U. S.-BRITISH DESTROYER DEAL LIKELY AT ROME

Ribbentrop on Way to See Mussolini— Spain's Role in War and Nazi Aid in Egyptian Campaign to Be Considered.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop left for Rome today to confer with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Count Ciano, and German sources indicated that the exchange of 50 United States destroyers for air and naval bases on British possessions in the Atlantic probably would be among the subjects discussed.

Von Ribbentrop is expected to reach Rome tomorrow.

Spain and Egypt—both of extreme importance in the present conduct of the war—were expected to be the prime subjects of the conversations, but one German source indicated that the Rome-Berlin Axis Powers were concerned over the destroyer transaction.

Spain, it was indicated, wishes to play a more active part in the affairs of the Rome-Berlin Axis, but is militarily unable, and economically in a poor way. Yet its geographical position, plus its natural resources, are such that it is a desirable Axis partner.

That Spain will want something in return for its co-operation is accepted, and most frequently mentioned is the great French island colony of Madagascar, in the Indian Ocean.

Secret Treaty Possible.

From a usually reliable source it was learned that the Rome conference is likely to result in giving legal expression to Spain's adherence. This may be in the form of a secret treaty, but may also be indicated in a public pronouncement.

The Berlin visit of Spanish Interior Minister Ramon Serrano Suner, this week, said the well-informed Hamburger Fremdenblatt, was not only a demonstration of "Spain's unshakable belief in the victory of the Axis Powers," but showed "on which side the new Spain of Franco finds itself."

All morning papers in Madrid declared in identical headlines: "As from now on, we are present in Europe's fate. We aren't belligerents, but neither are we indifferent."

(The newspaper Ya wrote: "Spain aims at marking spiritual boundaries with friendly nations of a more solid friendship, especially in Europe's new situation, and extending Spain's moral culture and influence even to South America, which is part of our own blood and effort.")

Importance of Egyptian Drive.

Italy's invasion of Egypt is regarded here as a factor of importance in the further conduct of the war. The Suez Canal is one of the choicest objectives of Ital-

LONDON DAMAGE EXCEEDS ROTTERDAM'S, WARSAW'S, SAY WAR CORRESPONDENTS

By DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).

MILITARY attaches and correspondents who experienced the blizzards of bombs which fell on Warsaw, Barcelona and Madrid expressed belief today that London already has taken more punishment than any other city, even Rotterdam, in the last 11 days of intensive German air attacks.

Despite these attacks, however, the consensus of these experienced observers was that the German luftwaffe had failed to achieve the raids' two main purposes and that the prospects of invasion were diminished because of this failure.

Comparing other bombed cities with London, one British correspondent who claims to be "the world's most bombed man," said:

"Rotterdam caught a packet, but it was all in one section. If you could fit London's bombed areas into a section of similar size, the ruin and damage would be far greater than Rotterdam's."

BRITAIN TRIES OUT NEW METHOD OF DOWNING RAIDERS

Nature of Device, Already Used in Small Areas, Is Kept Secret.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Britain is experimenting with a new method of bringing down German aircraft which already has proved successful in defending small areas, informed sources said tonight. The nature of the device remains secret. Informants said, however, that it was not a gun, not a ray and had nothing to do with balloons. It was said it had not yet been used in the London barrage.

The informants said the device was comparatively easy to manufacture and required only a small force to operate.

COMMONS IN SECRET SESSION DEBATES EFFECT OF AIR RAIDS

Members Representing London and Other Constituencies Call Attention to Problems.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP). — Effects of Germany's air assaults on Britain were debated today in a secret session of the House of Commons after a brief public session.

An official announcement said "members representing London and other constituencies affected drew attention to the many problems which have arisen." Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, replied to questions.

The House of Lords also held a secret session.

NAZI BOMB DROPPED NEAR U. S. EMBASSY IS REMOVED

Missile Believed to Be of Delayed-Action Type; London Attache Reports "Hell of a Night."

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP). — A bomb, believed to be of the delayed action type, dropped by German raiders in the vicinity of the United States Embassy last night, was removed today.

All persons in the building took refuge on the first floor during the night. One member of the staff said: "We certainly had a hell of a night—they were popping all around us."

NOTHING KNOWN OF BIG GUNS SHELLING LONDON, BRITISH SAY

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The British today cast doubt on Berlin reports that German Big Berthas from French coast emplacements had dropped shells on London.

"Nothing is known in London of shells from an enemy long-range gun having fallen on the capital," said the British Press Association.

BRITAIN HIT BY OWN BOMBS

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP). — Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, disclosed today that assembly of pieces of a bomb which blew a big crater in a Kent airdrome showed the bomb had "probably been taken from one of our dumps in France."

He referred to British supplies abandoned in the retreat through Dunkerque.

'ENTIRE BLOCKS' IN EAST END OF BRITISH CAPITAL RAZED, NAZIS SAY

Germans Report 7 of 10 'Usable' London Airports Damaged, 'Repeated' Raids on Liverpool, Attack on Glasgow.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—The German high command today reported attacks in the air battle of London which Nazi airmen said had wiped out "entire blocks" in some eastern districts of the British capital and apparently smashed through to the city's subway system.

Daylight reconnaissance showed a yawning, smoking crater which was believed to be the result of a tremendous direct hit on an underground railway, according to DNB, official news agency.

Fifteen British planes were shot down today in battles over England and three German planes are missing, an authorized source said tonight.

(London uses underground railway stations for bomb shelters.)

The high command announced an "all-caliber" bombardment, within the last 24 hours of day and night action, of the West India, London and Victoria docks, water and gas works, railway stations and Croydon Airdrome, among "war-essential objectives." Seven of the 10 remaining usable airports of London have been extensively damaged in the last 24 hours, it was reported.

The Bow Railway Station and the Thursten road junction were bombed last night and a number of British planes destroyed at Tilbury and Gravesend, according to the German radio.

The British were said to have lost nine planes yesterday against the Germans' four.

Liverpool, Glasgow Hit.

"New extensive fires resulted everywhere," said the daily military communique.

Airports and other objectives were bombed on the southeast coast and "Liverpool was attacked repeatedly day and night," the high command reported. "An airplane plant at Liverpool-Speke suffered heavy blows."

The Nazi raiders also reached into Scotland with an attack on Glasgow harbor. A 5000-ton British steamer was reported "heavily damaged" north of Ireland.

German coastal batteries hit several ships during a 10-minute attack on a westbound British convoy in the English Channel Monday, informed sources said today.

The ships, ranging up to 15,000 tons, these sources said, fled to the harbors of Dover, Deal and Folkestone.

British planes broke through to bomb Northern and Western Germany, the high command acknowledged, reporting that "residential quarters and settlements" were hit.

Authorized German sources said

F. fights off series of German attempts to raid London, reports 42 Nazi planes destroyed in day, with loss of nine; 300 attacking craft turned back in one battle east of London; capital has seven daylight alarms following heaviest night attack of war, in which many casualties and great damage are indicated; British bombers continue attack on German harbors and barge concentrations across channel. BERLIN—Nazis report entire blocks destroyed in East London, blocks destroyed in East London; claim direct hits on a subway, heavy damage to airports in London area; Liverpool and Glasgow bombed; Germans say British have lost 2096 planes since Aug. 1; report 15 British craft shot down over England today with loss of three; Ribbentrop goes to Italy for Axis conference.

BARRAGE BALLOONS ARE BLOWN FROM BRITAIN TO SWEDEN

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—German flyers reported today they had shot down 120 British barrage balloons drifting over to the continent.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 18 (AP). — Twenty-four British barrage balloons driven by the wind disrupted Swedish railway and electric power service last night and damaged homes in Denmark.

Balloons were seen this morning in the district north of Stockholm on the east Swedish coast.

The Swedish Air Corps and anti-aircraft guns and home guard units were used to shoot them down.

Presumably yesterday's gale along the English Channel had loosed great numbers of the bags.

Many electric trains in Sweden were delayed as a result of damage by the trailing cables, and the wire dropping over the tracks made the use of steam engines dangerous.

The central Swedish radio station's antenna at Motala was smashed, stopping the morning broadcast. Executives of a power station at Trolhattan announced that a great part of Sweden was without light last night. Emergency crews were working to restore service.

Stockholm's central power station was stopped this morning, and Stockholm-bound trains from the north were delayed.

ITALIANS REPORT TAKING TOWN BY SURPRISE MARCH

Say They Made 60-Mile Push Through Sandstorm —British Bomb Ships in Libya Ports.

ROME, Sept. 18 (AP).—Italian forces pushing into Egypt are organizing new bases and extending supply lines for a thrust along the coast, the Italian high command reported today, after moving into Sidi Barrani, 60 miles beyond the Libyan frontier.

The high command said stiff British resistance had been crushed all along the line.

An authoritative source said the British tried to block the advance into Sidi Barrani with fortified and mined areas and by artillery and entrenched infantry.

Taken by Surprise.

A dispatch of Stefani, Italian official news agency, said native and Italian troops caught the British by surprise at Sidi Barrani yesterday by marching 60 miles on foot under cover of a sandstorm, and speedily forced them to retire from the key coastal point of their second line of defense.

The dispatch said the British hardly expected human beings could perform such a feat, especially since desert Arabs normally lie quiet

GERMANS RENEW NIGHT ASSAULTS ON CAPITAL

Attackers Repulsed Over Thames Estuary in Day Time Thrusct — City Hard Hit in Overnnight Foray — Many Casualties.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—British fighter pilots and ground gunners met massed German raiders today in a great battle east of London and were reported to have turned back the full power of one of the greatest assaults thus far pointed at this capital.

The British Press Association said the attackers were beaten off in a terrific engagement over the Thames Estuary while Londoners sought shelter during the fifth alarm of the day following a record night-long attack in which the Government said it feared casualties "may be heavier than in recent nights."

New Night Alarm.

As the first night air raid warning sounded at 7:54 o'clock (12:54 p. m. St. Louis time)—about the hour the Germans have been starting their dusk-to-dawn raids—the Government announced that 42 Nazi planes were destroyed today in battles over England. Loss of nine British planes was admitted, with the pilots of five of them reported safe.

Anti-aircraft fire opened up in two defense areas as the night alarm was given.

In all, up to 6 p. m., there were seven air-raid alarms in the capital —the longest series of daylight attacks of the war.

The fifth alarm today was London's 100th since the start of the war.

During the daytime attacks, the Air Ministry said, no bombs fell on London itself, althuogh a number exploded in the region of the Thames Estuary, killing an undetermined number of persons.

In central London, distant explosions of falling bombs could be heard, and there were flashes of light in the sky.

The Nazis last night battered all sections of the city and scored direct hits on three famous stores—D. H. Evans & Co., general drapers; John Lewis & Co., noted for its silks, and Bourne & Hollingsworth, women's and children's wear, all in Oxford street of the fashionable Mayfair district.

300 Raiders.

Three formations of twin-engined bombers flying at 15,000 feet and escorted by swarms of Messerschmitts—about 300 planes in all —crossed England's first line of defense, the channel cliffs, at midday and drove toward smoking, battered London.

The sky at the channel coast seemed to an Associated Press reporter to be full of planes. Exhaust from the high-flying motors traced an eccentric pattern across the sky.

At one time this witness counted 200 separate wisps of exhaust vapor.

HIGHEST TIDE OF YEAR ON BRITAIN'S BEACHES; NO SIGNS OF INVASION

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).

THE highest tide of the year lapped Britain's beaches today, but no troop-laden barges of Adolf Hitler took advantage of them to attempt an invasion.

The sea will take at least a week to return to normal level.

One Nazi Oil Bomb and What It Did To 5 Women, Child in London Home

By W. T. YARBROUGH

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—"It is feared that casualties may be heavier than in recent nights," said the calm official communique.

Not so calm, I saw rescue workers bring the still forms of a baby and five women from the basement of a flaming, bomb-shattered home in Northeastern London on just one ambulance ride to gather up the dead and injured from this moonlight raid.

A telephone call sent an ambulance to a three-story building, already in flames. One ambulance which reached the scene first was just leaving.

"Two—badly hurt," a policeman said. "One of those oil bombs."

Two men with a pick and spade dug frantically at the foundation hacking through solid concrete.

"There's five down there," one of the workers said.

Then somewhere below a man's voice said over and over:

"All dead. All dead."

The man came up the basement steps holding the body of a baby about 6 months old. Other men in blue uniforms were coming up. One of them said, "Six altogether—not five. There's five adults and one child."

One by one, five women were brought up and stretched on blankets. Some bystanders turned away.

The woman ambulance driver and a fireman worked over the victims, trying artificial respiration. When doctors arrived, they found the baby and two women dead, but detected life in the others and sent them away in the amblance.

The woman driver told us:

"That's one bomb. We've had worse. We've had absolute hell."

In the gray dawn we had tea and waited for an all-clear signal.

621 British, 1867 Nazi Planes Lost In Last 40 Days, London Asserts

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The British air force has lost 621 planes of all kinds and fewer than 600 men since Aug. 8, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, said today, while in the same period the Germans have lost 1867 planes and 4000 men.

British flyers in the Near East have shot down 56 Italian planes with a loss of 15 to themselves, the Minister added.

The Minister said that the decrease in German plane production as a result of British bombings had been placed as high as 30 per cent and that loss of sleep affected the morale of German workers.

He said that while Nazi planes bombed London and killed civilians, retaliatory attacks by the R. A. F. would be a "betrayal of our responsibility for the defense of London and this country" because it would divert Britain's flyers from military objectives.

Germany, he conceded, is superior in number of machines and in the shorter distances its men must fly, but Britain is confident of "beating the enemy because our machines are much better and our men are much better."

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—The British air force lost 2096 planes in August and the first two weeks of September, DNB, official German news agency, said today.

Recapitulating figures in the daily high command communiques, DNB said the British lost 1354 planes in August, 481 the first week of September and 261 the second week.

sions marking their way. When they were well inland the British flyers made battle contact.

The rattle of machine guns and aerial cannon echoed from high in the clouds and the formations broke up into a countless series of dogfights.

Large Escort.

In today's big thrust at London, German bombers were vastly outnumbered by their escort of sharp-nosed Messerschmitts. The exact number of bombers was undetermined, but observers said the fighter escort was probably the largest ever sent to protect such a small number.

British Hurricanes and Spitfires, hovering on patrol at altitudes even higher than the Germans' 15,000 feet, dived on the enemy over the Thames Estuary, timing their attack to coincide with the full blast of the British ground defense.

The geometrical patterns of the raid formations were turned topsy-turvy in the 15 minutes of twisting, diving, climbing battle in which individual fighters chose their opponents.

Attack From Below.

Swift-rising British interceptor planes joined the battle from below as the Hurricanes and Spitfires attacked from above. Shell bursts from booming "archies" studded the scene of tumult.

A toll of raiders was taken at the very coastline, before the massed formations reached the Thames. One correspondent said two Messerschmitts toppled out of control there and another was seen to splash into the sea.

Three persons were killed and five seriously injured in a Southwestern town when enemy raiders scored direct hits on two shops.

A Nazi plane was shot down in battle over another town in Western England. Four of its crew were killed and one was injured.

The fifth raid alarm sounded in London at 12:43 p. m. and ended at 2:26 p. m. Other afternoon warnings were from 4:08 to 4:28 o'clock and 5:10 to 5:54 o'clock.

A strong westerly wind blew in the Straits of Dover today and the sun shone through breaks in dense low clouds. A slight mist over the sea veiled the French coastline. Yesterday a gale churned the channel and British airmen reported it had scattered the concentration of "invasion" barges and other vessels along the German-held coast, compelling the ships to take shelter in less open waters.

Early Raiders Driven Off.

The first German planes which appeared over London by daylight apparently sought to survey damage left by the night raiders, but were driven away by British fighters and anti-aircraft guns.

During succeeding alarms Londoners heard renewed gunfire and the drone of planes.

The first four morning daylight raids totaled 98 minutes.

It was disclosed today that the famous Lambeth Walk market place had been struck three times in a recent raid. Two bombs fell in a narrow street behind the shopping center and the third hit a shop in the market place itself.

Attack of Nearly 10 Hours.

Londoners were kept in their shelters for nine hours and 54 minutes until the all clear signal at 6 a. m. The longest previous raid lasted nine hours and 40 minutes Sept. 8-9.

As in recent days, the bombers gave the city little respite before renewing the assault. After a rest period of only one hour and 12 minutes, the first alarm of the day sounded at 7:12 a. m., ending 20 minutes later. The second alarm came at 8:18 a. m. and lasted 23 minutes.

Renewal of daylight raids today marked the start of the fourth month of daily air attacks on England which official reports indicate have caused almost 13,000 civilian casualties, including at least 3333 deaths. The heaviest toll came in the first 15 days of this month—during which, Prime Minister Churchill announced yesterday, 2000 civilians were killed and 8000 injured.

The Air Ministry news service reported that British fighters engaged more than 200 German Messerschmitts and Heinkels "in a 100-mile-an-hour gale over Kent, Sussex, Surrey and the Thames Estuary" late yesterday.

The Germans were said to have scattered hurriedly and fled for safety.

At least 12 German planes were shot down last night and three British planes were lost, the Air Ministry announced.

Use New Tactic.

Nazi raiders, gliding silently over London targets in a new tactic to surprise anti-aircraft batteries, showered both incendiary and high explosive bombs on the West End, which had been hit in yesterday afternoon's raids.

Both types of bombs also fell in East and Southeast London. Scores of houses were reported demolished. Casualties were reported at one large store, where several hundred persons crowded into a shelter at the rear of the establishment. Burglar alarms were set shrilling and wax dummies were sprawled in the debris.

At the John Lewis store, two charred walls remained. Of the three major firms, only the shop of Bourne & Hollingsworth looked as if it ever could be used again.

Eight firemen were killed in a Southeast London district, five of them when a bomb fell between two trucks en route to a blaze.

Casualties also were reported when a bomb dropped near a hotel, blasting a large crater in a roadway, bursting a water main and flooding a shelter occupied by hotel guests. The same bomb was reported to have damaged the subway.

Numerous small fires, started by "Molotov breadbaskets," or incendiary bombs, were extinguished quickly by firemen and householders.

Other Areas Attacked.

Other parts of England felt the blows of aerial raiders but the Government said the damage on the whole was slight.

Several persons, including a child, were killed in northwest coastal towns, and slight damage was reported at industrial premises in the Glasgow area of Scotland.

One bomb smashed obliquely into the cellar of a house in Northwest London, leaving the house balanced precariously over the crater.

A number of persons injured during the morning bombings were taken into a movie theater for treatment.

Despite the raidwarnings many persons remained in the streets, watching the sky duels between raiders and defenders.

The Spanish Embassy was slightly damaged by an incendiary bomb in a recent raid, it was made known today.

A bomb fell on the roof and burned or broke through into the upper story, where the flames were extinguished before they gained headway. No one was injured.

New Destroyer Commissioned.

BOSTON, Sept. 18 (AP). — The new U. S. destroyer Mayo was commissioned today at the Boston navy yard an hour after arrival from the Quincy Fore River shipyard, where it was launched last March. The destroyer Lansdale was commissioned at the navy yard yesterday.

and cover themselves during such storms.

The 12 ancient Roman wells at Sidi Barrani, which the Italians counted on to relieve their water supply problem in the Western desert were found salted and dynamited, however, Stefani said.

(The Italian radio, emphasizing the difficulty in supplying fresh water, said new wells were being drilled and waterpipes laid to support the attack.)

The Italian wireless said four columns of natives and blackshirts were attacking all along the frontier and one of them was carrying forward a wide encircling maneuver from the south.

To Spare Cairo.

Stefani declared it was "absurd" to think that Italian bombers might attack Cairo.

Answering "British broadcasts," Stefani said responsible circles pointed out that Cairo is an "open city," that is unfortified, and a "place sacred to the moslems."

"When our planes bombed oil depots at Suez," it added, "they rigorously avoided damage to Egyptian dwellings."

Nevertheless, Il Giornale D'Italia declared Egypt would have to accept a "new order" from Italy, similar to the German domination over East and Central Western Europe. This is true, the paper said, regardless of the results of British pressure to get Egypt to declare war under their military alliance.

The high command reported the destruction of 11 British planes, the probable destruction of two others and the capture of one intact. It acknowledged the loss of six Italian craft. The Italians reported their flyers machine-gunned British troops.

Libyan Ports Raided.

While the Fascists were consolidating their new positions for a push toward the next objective, Mersa Matruh, on the road to Alexandria, British planes made night raids on the Libyan ports of Bengazi and Derna. The Italians admitted a torpedo boat and a pontoon were sunk in these attacks, a steamer damaged and several fires set.

The Italian communique further reported:

"At Malta one of our Picchiatelli (little dive bomber) formations, escorted by pursuit planes, bombed Micabba airport, causing fires and considerable damage and destroying at least three planes on the ground. Enemy pursuit planes, after having sought to escape combat with our escorting planes, attacked the Picchiatelli, which counter-attacked decisively, shooting down two enemy planes. Two of our planes failed to return.

In East Africa.

"In East Africa our air force bombed Bomba, in lower Sudan, damaging a small fort and setting fire to an encampment.

"During a scouting expedition over Aden, one of our planes, attacked by English pursuit planes, seriously damaged an enemy plane and then returned unharmed to its base.

"An enemy plane was destroyed on the ground by one of our planes at Saraf Said, northwest of Gallabat.

"Enemy air raids on Assab, Massaua, Harmil and Asmara caused no damage. One person was injured and light damage was caused to a hotel at Diredawa. One enemy plane was probably shot down by naval anti-aircraft defense.

"An enemy plane of the Blenheim type, headed for Malta, landed by mistake on Pantelleria airport and was captured intact with a crew of two officers and one non-commissioned officer.

"Survivors from an English steamer of 5800 tons sunk by one of our submarines operating in the Atlantic have been landed at Lisbon."

BRITISH POSTPONE DECISIVE BATTLE

CAIRO, Sept. 18 (AP).—Heavy and "successful" bombing of Italian troops at Sidi Barrani, Egypt, was reported today in a British army headquarters communique.

The Italian invaders, who stormed along the Mediterranean coastline of Egypt's western desert, the communique said, were consolidating their position before the expected advance toward Alexandria, the British naval base.

Where the British would make a stand remained a military secret. British operations thus far, it was said, have been designed to harass rather than halt the two motorized Italian columns leading the eastward drive.

The farthest point in the Italian advance line at present is believed to be 80 miles within Egypt.

The next objective presumably is Mersa Matruh, 100 miles farther along the coastal road and site of a British air base.

Between Sidi Barrani and Alexandria lie 250 miles of rough going for an invader. The British do not regard their present position as serious.

One apparent reason why the British are biding their time before joining in a decisive battle is the expectation that the Italians' supply difficulties will increase as they move farther from their bases through a desert which offers no food and little water. The Italians apparently are using a great number of large tank trucks and are distilling sea water.

Since the Italians are hugging the shoreline rather than trying to push through the more difficult inland desert country with its mountains and depressions, they may expose themselves to attacks from the sea, it was said.

The British Eastern Mediterranean fleet, based at Alexandria, has been blockading the coast to prevent Italy from supplying its African possessions, and naval units have attacked coastal points of Libya.

Three Italian Planes Reported Shot Down Over Malta.

VALLETTA, Malta, Sept. 17 (Delayed) (AP).—Italian bombers raided the British Island of Malta twice today, causing damage to Government property.

Three of the raiders were reported shot down in a morning raid. In the afternoon British fighter planes flew out over the Mediterranean to meet another formation of Italian planes and drove them off.

BRITISH CONSIDER ITALIAN DRIVE ON SUDAN AS LIKELY

Rainy Season Near End — Fascists Reported Concentrating at Kassala, Just Over Eritrea Border

By RICHARD MOWRER

The Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Special Cable. Copyright, 1940.

ON THE EGYPTIAN-LIBYAN FRONT, Sept. 18.—The British are considering the probability that the Italians in Ethiopia will start a drive against the Sudan soon as part of the Italian offensive against Egypt.

The rainy season is almost over and it is unlikely that the Italians in East Africa will just sit and watch their supplies diminishing. The Italians are reported to be concentrated in recently-captured Kassala in the Sudan, just over the Eritrean border, and contemplating an attack on Atbara, important communication center 250 miles away.

If the Italians attack in that direction, they may make impressive gains as far as distance is concerned, but the chances are good that they will find the British prepared and waiting for them at the end of the road.

No Real Battle Yet.

Whereas the Italian invasion of Egypt has begun, the Battle for Egypt has not. Since Friday the Italians have advanced rapidly along Egypt's Mediterranean coast toward Alexandria. The enemy has moved fast and efficiently, using Ansaldo "baby" tanks and medium tanks as well as truck transport for guns, troops and aircraft support. Light British covering forces are reported to be using flexible harassing tactics with tanks and light guns as they fall back, whereas the Royal Air Force is concentrating its bombings on the Italian columns that stick to the road.

But so far there has been no real clash between British and Italian forces on the Western desert. At some point between Sidi Barrani and Alexandria the two armies will clash and then it will be the battle for Egypt, or perhaps the first of several battles. This fact seems worth emphasizing in view of Italian radio assertions that Sollum, for example, was held by large bodies of British troops and was strongly fortified.

Light British Forces.

Three days before the Italians began their advance, I was in Sollum. The British had a small covering force along the rim of the escarpment that overlooks the abandoned village; another group was camped several miles south of Hellfire Pass not far from a number of dummy camps made up of boxes and gasoline cans, assembled to resemble tanks and trucks. In Sollum itself, there wasn't a soul. Several miles east of Sollum a small scattered force of Britishers lived in sandy dugouts in a lumpy, shrub-covered area near the sea. A few hundred yards from the damaged, whitewashed houses of Sollum, the British did have a couple of guns hidden under some fig trees—I watched them shoot.

Fortifications in the Sollum area, however, were limited almost entirely to anti-aircraft slit trenches and sandy pits where Bren guns pointed skyward.

Several weeks ago the bulk of the British forces was withdrawn from the border area in anticipation of an Italian push. The British wanted the Italians to get lengthy desert communications.

The invasion again raises the question of Egypt's position in the war. On June 12, Prime Minister Aly Maher Pasha declared before the Parliament that Egypt would participate in the war only if attacked.

30 MINE FIELDS PLANTED BY PLANES IN NAZI WATERS, BRITISH MINISTRY SAYS

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).

BRITISH pilots have planted more than 30 separate mine fields in German-occupied harbors and territorial waters from the Norwegian coast to the Bay of Biscay, the Air Ministry announced today.

The mine-sowing began in May.

"It is known that thousands of tons of enemy shipping have been destroyed in them," the ministry said.

"Some of the mines have been laid within a stone's throw of the quayside in some enemy harbors and the enemy has not been able to prevent their being laid at will, even in strictly preserved and heavily defended waters."

DALADIER, GAMELIN CHARGES PREFERRED

VICHY, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Government announced today that definite charges have been placed against Edouard Daladier, former Premier, and Gen. Maurice Gamelin, both of whom are in administrative custody in the chateau Chazeron near Riom in the "war blame" case.

The nature of the charges was not disclosed.

Filing of the charges means the men will be placed on trial, but no date has been fixed.

A communique of the Ministry of Justice tonight said:

"The Prosecutor-General has communicated to the Supreme Court of Justice an official complaint in the nature of charges against Monsieur Daladier and Gen. Gamelin."

Former Premiers Paul Reynaud and Leon Blum and former Minister Georges Mandel are held in the same chateau under a decree which allows the Government to intern in "the administrative interest" any person deemed dangerous to the national security. No specific charge has been lodged against Reynaud, Mandel or Blum.

The urgent question of food supplies for unoccupied France again was studied by the Council of Ministers yesterday. Paris dispatches said strict rationing of all principal foodstuffs would be started in the Nazi-held zone Sept. 23.

The scarcity of some needed supplies in unoccupied France is becoming more and more acute. Soap, sugar, razor blades and toothpaste are fast giving out. Shoes and men's clothing are extremely scarce. Restaurants are forbidden to serve coffee with the evening meal. The sale of bread is prohibited until it is 24 hours old—to discourage one's taste for it.

France Opens Communal Commissary in German-Occupied Area.

PARIS, Sept. 14 (Delayed—By Way of Berlin) (AP).—France's first communal commissary to supply approximately 20,000 persons with necessities has been opened in Arpajon, in the Seine et Oise department of German-occupied France.

The commissary, under supervision of the Mayors of 16 communes in the Arpajon area, will sell cooperatively such essentials as soap, oil, canned goods, coffee, dried vegetables, butter and cheese.

R. A. F. KEEPS UP BOMBING ATTACKS ON NAZI HARBORS

Shipping, Military Stores Heavily Damaged, Ministry Reports—Fires Set in Raid on Cherbourg.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Shipping and military stores concentrated in many German-held ports along the north coast of Europe suffered "much damage" last night as the result of heavy, repeated British bombing attacks, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Cherbourg, formerly France's great trans-Atlantic port, was heavily attacked, a communique said, and two supply ships were sunk and many fires started in the harbor.

German heavy gun emplacements at Cap Gris Nez, just opposite Dover, also were reported bombed.

A communique said the Royal Air Force had carried out daylight raids yesterday on shipping and other objectives in Nazi-held Belgium and The Netherlands. The communique:

"Medium bombers of the R. A. F. were again over Zeebrugge and Ostend Tuesday afternoon. Direct hits were made on harbor installations at Ostend, and at Zeebrugge ships were bombed. One aircraft attacked four barges off the coast an. direct hits on two of them were obtained.

"Another raider bombed a convoy which was sighted off The Hague. A new airddome at Ymuiden was also attacked. At Zeebrugge, where a concentration of barges was bombed, two Messerschmitt 109s engaged our aircraft, but both made off after an exchange of fire.

"Last night bomber command aircraft made heavy and sustained attacks on the ports of Hamburg, Antwerp, Terneuzen, Flushing, Zeebrugge, Dunkerque, Calais and Boulogne. Much damage was done to shipping and to military stores.

"Other forces of R. A. F. aircraft bombed the distribution centers of Krefeld, Hamm, Ehrang, Osnabruck, Soest, Brussels and the goods yard at Stockum, near Cologne.

"Two of our aircraft have not reported to their base."

Moonlight Raiders Demolish 60 Buildings in East Side Area, Wreck Three Big Stores in Fashionable West End.

By HELEN KIRKPATRICK

The Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Special Cable. Copyright, 1940.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Scarcely a district in London escaped last night's bombing, which was the most prolonged and in the West End seemed the heaviest we have yet had. Casualties will probably turn out to be the highest of these last 11 days.

While the poorer districts of the East End took a tremendous pounding with 60 houses demolished in one quarter and 28 in another, hardly 10 minutes passed in the West End without the crump of a high explosive, often followed by incendiary and oil bombs. For the second night in succession I saw from my window big fires started in the West End when three Oxford street stores were hit. As incendiaries fired buildings and flames leapt skyward, the Nazi planes overhead returned to the scene of the fire and dropped high explosives into it.

My hotel, the sturdiest in London, reeled and shook from shock after shock and three times during the night I was convinced it would topple. As we stood for several hours at the window watching the Oxford street fire, we flattened ourselves on the floor five times as screaming bombs came down so close we were convinced our names were on each one.

The Nazis dumped bomb after bomb on the fashionable Mayfair residential districts and many of these were delayed action bombs, most of which subsequently went off. They were using their biggest bombs—1000 pounders, one of which landed in the vicinity of the hotel without, however, breaking any windows in the neighborhood.

The moonlight and unceasing gun barrage forced the Nazis to fly so high it was rare even to hear their motors.

BOY IMITATING WHISTLING BOMB JAILED IN BRITAIN

ROCHESTER, Kent, Sept. 18 (AP).—Edward Holloway, 18 years old, was sentenced to 14 days in jail as "the leader of a gang of Hooligans who hung about the streets during air raids and made noises like sirens and whistling bombs."

BELFAST, Ireland.—The City Council voted to abolish Berlin and Silvio as street names and substitute Winston and Spitfire.

LONDON — Hearing agonized cries of "Help, help!" firemen battered their way through the wall of a wrecked house while German bombers circled overhead. They rescued . . . a baldheaded, profane parrot.

LONDON—John Pryor, 56 years old, was fined two shillings sixpence (about 50 cents) for being found drunk in a heap of glass near the spot where a high explosive bomb burst.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP). — Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, told a luncheon gathering today that British workers, including those in London, were maintaining their increased output of war goods despite bombings.

Their work, he declared, would stand as one of "the most wonderful achievements" in the nation's history.

NICK AND WESTON RACKET AND TRUST CASE GOES TO JURY

Prosecutor Says They Sold Out Union—Defense Alleges Government Meddling in Labor Fight.

BOTH DEFENDANTS ON WITNESS STAND

Nick Denies 10 of 12 Charges in Indictment, Not Asked About Other Two—Testifies Briefly.

The case of John P. Nick and Clyde A. Weston, ousted bosses of the movie operators' union, on trial in the United States District Court on charges of violation of the racketeering statutes and the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, went to the jury at 2:20 o'clock this afternoon following argument of counsel and instructions by Judge John Caskie Collet.

Judge Charges Jury.

Judge Collet began his instructions to the jury at 12:20 o'clock. No one was permitted to leave or enter the closely packed courtroom during the two hours he talked. When he concluded the jury was taken to lunch.

"To clarify the issue, it makes no difference whether you like this law or not, as jurors it is your duty to follow the statutes," Judge Collet said.

He read the racketeering statute and went over the 12 counts in the indictment, pointing out that some charged conspiracy while others dealt with alleged overt acts. A verdict on the conspiracy counts must necessarily apply to both defendants, Judge Collet told the jury.

Conviction could be on all counts, the Court said, and, in that event, he would take the similarity of some counts into consideration in fixing punishment. The only evidence connecting Nick with the 1937 payoff by theater owners was circumstantial, the Judge said, adding, "that does not apply on the counts dealing with the Co-operative Sound Service Co."

Circumstantial evidence, the Court said, is sometimes the best evidence. He defined coercion as "compulsion depriving a person of unrestrained action." The Government contends that Nick and Weston coerced theater owners to enforce illegal demands.

In conclusion, Judge Collet cautioned the jury to take into full consideration the fact that, while unions are permitted under the law to call legitimate strikes, the exemption does not cover the use of a legitimate strike for an illegal purpose.

"To use a parallel situation," the Court explained, "if I had a legitimate errand to perform, but stole an automobile to perform it, the nature of the errand would not be a defense against a charge of theft."

On the question of the evidence, Judge Collet said certain testimony had been admitted to show the state of mind of theater owners with whom the defendant sdealt.

Prosecutor's Argument.

Assistant Attorney-General Roscoe T. Steffen, in his opening argument, told the jury: "This is a simple case," then read a portion of the racketeering statute, which makes it illegal to interfere with interstate commerce by obtaining, or attempting to obtain, money through threats, violence or coercion.

Steffen asked the jury to keep in mind three elements: Did the defendants attempt to obtain money, did they conspire or did they actually obtain what they sought? Asserting that the defense had sought to "twist the facts" to show that there had been no actual interference with the interstate movement of movie film, the prosecutor said, that makes no difference, any attempt to interfere is an interference under the law."

The evidence did not show that Nick got any part of the 1936 payoff of theater owners, Steffen told the jury, adding, "but we established that he knew about it and we proved that he was in on the 1937 deal."

Before 1937, Steffen pointed out, Local 143 had been represented in wage negotiations by a committee. "Peculiarly, in 1937 only two men represented the union, Nick and Weston. They knew about the 1936 pay-off, the 'picnic' you have heard about, and they demanded a wage increase of $30 a week, 75 per cent, for operators. That certainly was no bona fide demand."

"After Thimmig (Walter Thimmig, a member of the theater owners' wage committee) and Weston got together and Weston offered to deliver a satisfactory contract for $10,000, then Mr. Nick forgot about that $30 wage demand for the men. That, gentlemen, is a complete confession on the part of Mr. Nick that he and Weston were together in the deal."

Steffen asked the jury to recall testimony about a "victory dinner" at the York Hotel in 1937, when the operators approved the wage contract after Nick was reported to have told them, "Here it is, signed, sealed and delivered, you may not like it, but you will get used to it."

"That statement showed that Mr. Nick had a complete knowledge of

Prosecutor Says They Sold Out Union—Defense Alleges Government Meddling in Labor Fight.

BOTH DEFENDANTS ON WITNESS STAND

The evidence did not show that Nick got any part of the 1936 payoff of theater owners, Steffen told the jury, adding, "but we established that he knew about it and we proved that he was in on the 1937 deal."

Before 1937, Steffen pointed out, Local 143 had been represented in wage negotiations by a committee. "Peculiarly, in 1937 only two men represented the union, Nick and Weston. "That statement showed that Mr. Nick had a complete knowledge of the deal," the prosecutor declared.

Weston's Mortgage.

Steffen recalled testimony that exhibitors were afraid to go to the union headquarters, at 4 South Eighth street, because of the character of some of the men who loitered there. Discussing Weston's own testimony, Steffen told the jury: "He agreed with all the previous evidence on his meeting with certain exhibitors at the Jefferson-Gravois Bank on the day before Thanksgiving in 1937, except that he says he did not get the money. But on the day after Thanksgiving, Mr. Weston paid off $2500 on the mortgage on his home."

"The anti-racketeering statutes," Steffen asserted, "were designed to protect unions as well as employers." "Nick and Weston sold out the men they were working for," he said.

Bryan Purteet, defense attorney, began his argument with the statement that the Government had failed to prove any interference with the transmission of movie film.

"It is a fine theory, but it failed," Purteet said. "Soon State's rights will disappear and we will be governed by a dictator. Jefferson and Hamilton fought on this issue."

Purteet told the jury that the reason for the prosecution was "because a few jealous operators hate Nick and Weston."

"This is the first time to my knowledge that the Government has stepped in to prosecute a little corporation in the interest of big corporations," the defense lawyer continued.

"Battle for Union Control."

Purteet termed the prosecution "a battle for control of this union, with the Government on one side." He declared that whether Weston received money or not was not material in Federal Court, as "there are State laws governing that." Weston is under an extortion charge in the State courts.

In conclusion Purteet told the jury that he was a neighbor of Weston and, with tears streaming from his eyes, asked "from the heart" that you send him back to his two children waiting for him on Lookaway drive."

Sigmund Bass, attorney for Nick, branded the trial "a prosecution by the newspapers, which are sore because they could not get a conviction in the State courts." The attorney attacked the racketeering statute, which he called "a New Deal brain trust law."

"This law is a step toward Fascism," Bass declared.

He said there had been only five cases under the statute and none of them had reached the United States Supreme Court.

"These defendants have been charged, recharged and double-charged, you would think they had taken over the union on horseback with pistols drawn," Bass shouted.

In his closing remarks Steffen challenged the defense lawyers' statements that the racketeering statute was oppressive. "Its purpose is to preserve democracy, and it safeguards anyone who is not trying to extort money," the prosecutor declared.

Steffen said evidence in the case showed "a complete breakdown" of labor democracy in the movie opeerators' union. "The Government has undertaken to stamp out that sort of thing," he asserted. The law was passed, he added, in 1934, "when there was great danger of gangs getting control of business."

Nick's Testimony.

Nick was the last defense witness and was on the stand only 15 minutes, in contrast to the three hours Weston spent in repiying to questions. Nick, burly former international vice-president of the powerful Theatrical Brotherhood, denied 10 of the 12 charges in the Government indictment as the counts were read to him by his attorney, Sigmund Bass, who asked no questions on two of the Government's allegations.

Questions to which the witness replied a curt "No Sir," included these:

"Did you receive any part of the alleged pay-off in 1936? Did you conspire with Edward M. Brady? Did you receive any part of the alleged pay-off in 1937? Did you intend to make any bogus wage demands on exhibitors?"

Bass skipped counts eight and 10 of the indictment, which charge that Nick obtained money from the Co-operative Sound Service Co. Thomas Canavan, who succeeded Weston as head of the company, testified he split his salary of $300 a month with Nick and Weston.

Prosecutor's Questions.

Steffen asked Nick but two questions on cross-examination—whether the film exchange workers were organized when the defendant took them over and whether he appointed Canavan president of the film workers local, B-1. Nick replied in the affirmative to each question, then left the stand.

Government rebuttal witnesses were movie operators whose names appeared on a petition praising Nick's management of the operators' local, 143, and asking him to continue in command. Each of the seven witnesses testified that the petition did not represent his true sentiment Lester C. Chambers, the first rebuttal witness, said he signed the petition and voted approval of the 1937 wage contract, under which the work week was increased from 33 to 40 hours, "because I was afraid I would lose my card if I did not."

Harry A. Meyer, rebuttal witness, said he had heard Nick threaten to tear up membership cards, without which an operator could not work in a union theater. Terry Savage, Ray Niceley, Arthur Bode, Joseph Cchrempp and William Mulcahy "feared the consequences of refusal," they told the jury.

"Like Sheep to Slaughter."

In cross-examination Schrempp was asked by Bass if the union members had "followed Nick like sheep led to the slaughter."

"That is how I felt," the witness replied, "like a sheep going to the slaughter."

Weston, testifying yesterday, told how in July, 1935, after completing an assignment to reorganize the Pittsburgh local of the operators' union, he was assigned by George E. Browne, international president, to assist Nick in conducting the affairs of the St. Louis Local No. 143. He said he began an investigation of the union's affairs July 24. One of the first problems he handled, he said, was that of Negro operators, but he did not give details as to his action in this matter.

Tells of Sound Service.

Weston told of having taken part in, organizing the Co-operative Sound Service, and of his work in its interest, but denied that he had spoken of the enterprise as a racket, and insisted that it was "on the legit."

Defense counsel asked Weston about the charge that he demanded $10,000 from exhibitors for the 1937 operators' wage contract. He denied having told Thimmig, an exhibitor, that a satisfactory contract could be obtained by paying Weston $10,000, and denied that he received "either $6500 or 65 cents" from Thimmig. He said one of the theater owners, Sam Komm, made a proposal to "do business," which he resented, ordering Komm out of his office.

"In 1937," Weston testified, "there were negotiations with the exhibitors, who wanted to reduce wages 15 or 20 per cent. I countered, as is usual in labor bargaining, by asking for higher wages."

Asked whether union members were kept informed of negotiations for the 1937 contract with the St. Louis Amusement Co., Weston answered that the contract had been discussed at every union meeting until the final one at Hotel York, where the contract was approved.

Asked about dealings with Harry C. Arthur Jr., vice-president and resident partner of Fanchon & Marco Enterprises, which runs four large theaters and the St. Louis Amusement Co. chain, Weston said he told Arthur that if he got the Fanchon-Marco business, there would be no installation charge, and a charge of $5.77 a week for service.

He confirmed the statement of Arthur, in his testimony for the Government, that he borrowed $2000 from Arthur, and said he still owed the money. The transaction, he said, was connected with the building of Weston's home at 10,293 Lookaway drive. He said the loan was a business transaction, and that no concession or privilege was given to Arthur.

Greeting for New Business

WINDOWS BROKEN AT OFFICE OF NEW 'JUKE BOX' FIRM

Violence Again Flares Up in Highly Organized Coin Phonograph Distribution Business.

The intense rivalry among distributors of coin phonograph machines, which has frequently resulted in violence in th last two years, broke out anew early today when four plate-glass windows were smashed at the office of the Winrose Music Co., established a few weeks ago at 1916 Washington avenue.

Moritz Wand, 3162 Compton avenue, manager of the office, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the firm had placed about 50 phonographs in taverns and restaurants. He said he knew of no threats.

The business is owned by Sam Winsberg, who moved here recently from Chicago, Wand said. Winsberg was out of the city today. Wand said they had applied for membership in the International Association of Automatic Electric Phonograph Owners, which has headquarters in Chicago, but he did not know whether their application had been accepted.

Police expressed the opinion a new distributor was unwelcome in the highly organized "juke box" industry here. They recalled that at the time of the assassination of Arthur Schading, business agent of the Electricians' Union, in September, 1938, it was thought that the feud among rival associations of phonograph owners and rival unions seeking to organize the business might have provided a motive for the killing.

The windows in the Winrose office were smashed at 3:20 o'clock. Two in the front were 7 by 6 feet and two in the vestibule were 7 by 7 feet. Damage was not estimated. The loss was insured.

Thomas Cook, a fireman of Engine Co. No. 32, Twentieth and St. Charles streets, told police he heard a crash of glass and then saw a light truck being driven through a filling station on the southeast corner of Twentieth and Washington avenue, a few doors west of the Winrose office. After going through the filling station lot, the truck went south in Twentieth street and west in St. Charles at a high rate of speed.

MOLEY CRITICISES ROOSEVELT, GIVES HIS IDEA OF U. S. NEED

"Honest Hired Hand, Who After a Few Years Is Not Likely to Think He Owns Place."

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 18 (AP).—"What this country needs," Raymond Moley declared today in a talk sharply critical of President Roosevelt's candidacy for a third term," is a good, honest, industrious, competent hired hand . . . who, after a few years, is not likely to think he owns the place."

Moley, former "brain truster" and confidant of President Roosevelt, spoke before the Advertising Club of Minneapolis. He now is contributing editor of News Week magazine.

FRANK B. COLEMAN NAMED TO POST OF LATE JUDGE ROWE

Will Serve Until Dec. 31—His Successor Will Be Chosen in November General Election.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 18. — Former Circuit Judge Frank B. Coleman of St. Louis was appointed today by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark to succeed the late Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe of St. Louis, who died in Chicago last July while attending the Democratic National Convention.

The appointment will hold until Dec. 31 of this year. The remaining two years of Judge Rowe's original term of six years will be filled through the election of a successor in the November general election.

Judge Coleman, 61 years old, was a candidate for a Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge in the Aug. 6 primary election but was defeated. In the primary campaign Coleman had the indorsement of the special committee headed by former Judge Jesse McDonald, which recommended a slate of judicial candidates at the request of the Democratic City Committee, and also was indorsed by the St. Louis Lawyers and Bar Associations.

He was appointed to the Circuit bench the first time by Stark on Sept. 28, 1937, to succeed Circuit Judge J. Wesley McAfee, who had resigned to resume the private practice of law. The appointment was effective until the end of 1938. Coleman was defeated for a Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge in the 1938 primary election.

LANDON 'ON FARLEY TEAM'

"For First Time I Want to See Yanks Win," Republican Says.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 18 (AP).—Alf M. Landon and James A. Farley finally have joined forces—at least in a sporting way. The former national Democratic chairman recently sent Landon an autographed copy of a book. Replying, the 1936 Republican presidential nominee wrote: "For the first time I want to see the Yanks win."

Farley wrote back: "I read with interest what you had to say about the Yankees. I am glad that you finally are playing on my team."

Defense Board Says Oil Anti-Trust Suit Threatens Arms Program Delay

Reported of Opinion That Action Would Disrupt Tentative Plans and Discourage Co-operation of Industry.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Defense Commission was reported today to have criticised a proposed anti-trust suit against the big oil companies on the ground that it threatened to delay the preparedness program by disrupting tentative plans and discouraging co-operation by industry.

The commission has communicated its opinions to Attorney-General Jackson after a study of the contemplated civil action against 22 major oil companies and about 30 subsidiaries. Jackson requested the defense group's views last July 26 before deciding whether to file the suit.

The legal brief was drafted by the Justice Department's anti-trust division under the direction of Assistant Attorney-General Thurman Arnold. It strikes at alleged price-fixing and seeks to force the major companies to divest themselves of certain types of properties such as pipelines, tankers and marketing facilities. It also would force dissolution of some companies to divorce transportation and marketing from production of oil.

The defense commission did not recommend abandonment of the suit. It devoted itself largely to the objectives set forth, explaining that the commission's task merely was to determine whether those objectives "substantially impede the defense program."

The commission was said to feel that any necessary steps should be taken to eliminate restraints on competition or to end price fixing, if these existed.

The commission, however, urged a close study of the divestiture phases of the proposed suit. It stated that the present setup in the oil industry was "well adapted" to the defense program and that "divestiture may entail a loss of technical management and efficiency."

Discussing the possible divestiture of pipeline control, the commission reported that both army and navy were interested in having private companies build lines to transport gasoline to the Eastern states and thus avoid the long tanker haul around Florida. New construction would release tankers for handling products not adaptable to pipelines, it added.

The commission also said that substantial additions to the gasoline pipeline and terminal storage capacity would be necessary for defense, but that such work would be delayed pending the outcome of a suit.

Other sections of the brief likewise came in for critical discussion, some on the ground that they might tend to "becloud relationships between the Government and industry" at an important time.

Some Justice Department officials were said to be willing to push the suit even after deletion of the parts opposed by the defense commission. One informed person said elimination of the entire section setting forth the criticised objectives would not make the action valueless.

DR. GEORGE W. GOLER DIES; PIONEER IN PUBLIC HEALTH

As Rochester (N. Y.) Official He Established First Municipal Milk Station in U. S.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 18 (AP).—Dr. George W. Goler, who as Rochester health officer established the first municipal milk station and pre-natal clinics in the nation, died today. He was 76 years old.

He was appointed director of the Rochester Board of Health in 1896, when he formed the first two child welfare stations. His chief aid in a long fight to establish municipal milk stations was the late philanthropist, Nathan Straus.

In 1904, Dr. Goler established the first pre-natal clinics in public schools and in 1926 he introduced iodine into city water to combat adolescent goiter, a plan which brought him into conflict with other medical authorities.

ST. LOUIS SELLS ITS LAST REMAINING WHARF BOAT

The city sold its last remaining wharf boat yesterday to Leo C. Krell, a real estate dealer at 3154 South Grand boulevard, for $756. Included in the deal was an adjoining derrick boat.

Tied up near the foot of Market street, the boat has in recent years been leased to a private owner, since the city had no use for it. Krell told a Post-Dispatch reporter he had not decided what he would do with the vessel.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft will take the stump in New England and in the West on behalf of Wendell L. Willkie, the Ohioan said today. Taft unsuccessfully sought the G. O. P. presidential nomination.

LIQUOR STORE OWNER HELD IN WHISKY THEFT

Arrested in Adjacent Drug Store After Proprietor Found Bottles Missing.

For six months William Bloemker has been eyeing customers who loitered near the cigarette and liquor shelves in his drugstore, 7526 Florissant road.

Every night he would lock up feeling sure none had escaped his scrutiny for a moment. Every week, as he ultimately told the Sheriff's office, he would find his stock a few cartons or a few bottles short.

He was contemplatively gazing at the wall last Thursday when he noticed the print of a grimy hand beside the washroom ventilator, which matches a similar ventilator in the adjacent Normandy liquor store, 7524 Florissant road.

He sent a friend next door to buy three pints of liquor. Each, he said, bore a cost mark in his own code. Then he told the Sheriff. Deputy C. Patrick Bennett arranged to take turns with him on overnight watch.

It was Bennett's turn last night. About 1 o'clock he heard a rumpus in the washroom. He crouched near the prescription counter and saw a man crawl toward the front of the store.

"Lie where you are," he shouted, and flicked on the lights. The answer, he reported, was, "Shoot me—I might as well be dead as back in the penitentiary."

At Clayton the man said he was Victor Palsenberger, 29 years old, proprietor of the liquor store. He told Bennett he had served a four-year term for a street car holdup in 1932. Bloemker, who estimated several hundred dollars' worth of liquor had been taken from his shelves, said he found his cost marks on about $100 worth in the liquor store today.

THIRD OF CROSSING CRASHES LAID TO AUTOS HITTING TRAINS

SEATTLE, Sept. 18 (AP)—A railroad man told the American Association of State Highway Officials yesterday that a third of last year's railroad crossing accidents occurred because motorists ran into the side of trains.

J. G. Brennan of Washington, grade crossing engineer for the American Association of Railroads, urged improved highway signs as one solution of the railroad-highway crossing problem.

A billion-dollar appropriation to improve highways for national defense was urged by Congressman James W. Mott of Oregon.

WOMAN USES PUNCH TAUGHT BY FIGHTER TO BEAT OFF PAIR

With Knife at Her Throat, She Lands Right Hook Learned From Tommy Loughran.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (AP).—Polly Wright, 26-year-old secretary to a physician, used a "right hook that Tommy Loughran taught me" to beat off an attack by two men who stole into the physician's home.

She told detectives that when she entered a darkened room last night she felt something sharp against her throat and heard a man say: "Get back over there."

The detectives said Miss Wright gave this account: With a knife at her throat she was forced into a corner of the room and ordered to disrobe. She swung a punch that staggered her assailant.

"It was a right hook that Tommy Loughran taught me one time in a playful mood," she said. "It almost floored him and gave me a chance to run into the lighted hallway and up the stairs. When I got upstairs I called the police on the extension phone." The two men escaped before police arrived.

EUROPE SHOULD SEE U. S. AT WORK, WILLKIE DECLARES

Rulers Would Never Attack America if They Did He Tells Phoenix, Ariz. Crowd at Stadium.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 18 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie said today that, if Europe's rulers "could look across the ocean and see a great people at work," they never would attack the United States.

Calling for national unity, Willkie told an audience in Phoenix High School stadium that it is as necessary to revitalize domestic economy as it is to build a strong defense.

The Republican presidential nominee came by a chartered plane from Albuquerque, N. M., where he spoke last night.

Willkie spoke under a broiling sun. The bleachers, with a capacity of 10,500, were filled.

"Every place I have been," the nominee said, "the crowds that have come to see me have exceeded even the most exaggerated predictions that had been given me.

"The thing that gratifies me the most is that here in free, untouched America, democracy is working so vigorously.

"We must build a force of airplanes and armament so strong that no dictator will dare to strike. But that will not be adequate to carry America through this trying time. We must rehabilitate our domestic economy."

Declaring the administration wanted "to sabotage American industry," the nominee drew laughter from the sunbaked crowd by remarking, "every shirt I see, every suit I see is simply saturated with hidden taxes."

His plane took off at 12:27 p. m. for Riverside, Cal. and two others carrying his advisers and newspapermen followed immediately.

WILLKIE'S SPEECH AT ALBUQUERQUE

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH WILLKIE AIR PARTY, Sept. 18.—Wendell L. Willkie continued today his line of attack on the New Deal and President Roosevelt, making it more sulphurous as he progressed deeper into the West where Roosevelt's strength is supposedly great.

He left his special train at Albuquerque, N. M., to fly to Phoenix, the only stop on the way to Riverside, Cal.

At Albuquerque Willkie had gone directly from his train to a floodlighted ball park where a crowd of some 15,000—the largest political rally in the history of the State, according to Republican claims—waited to hear him pour out his wrath on the administration at Washington.

He accused the "Tommy Corcorans and the Benny Cohens" of going on a spending orgy that made the profligacy of the Kings of France and the Rajahs of Persia look cheap by comparison.

"If you re-elect Roosevelt," said Willkie, "you also reappoint the Tommy Corcorans and the Benny Cohens who have run around for ten years throwing monkey wrenches into the economic machinery of the United States and they have done it so effectively that in seven years they have added 25 billions to the public debt and spent 60 billions and there isn't a man, woman or child in this audience who, by spending the same amount, couldn't have accomplished as much."

Cheers and Applause.

When he paused after such crackling blasts at the New Deal, his audience, massed in bleachers and crowded on the baseball field, responded with cheers and applause. As at Tulsa, Ok., where he addressed a similar large open-air crowd, the G. O. P. candidate spoke extemporaneously, developing the by now familiar themes of Roosevelt failure and ruin.

Bowling along in his own free-hand style, Willkie at times makes remarkable statements. He tells each audience that the rich cannot pay for New Deal spending. If every income of more than $5000 were confiscated, he says, it still wouldn't be enough.

"The rich always take care of themselves," he said to the crowd last night. "The cost of government comes out of your faces."

Seated on the platform immediately behind him were several of the wealthy angels of the Republican party in New Mexico, where politics usually resolves itself into a simple matter of dollars and cents. Among the G. O. P. benefactors taking a prominent part in last night's rally was Cyrus McCormick, national committeeman for New Mexico, and a member of a wealthy family.

Conspicuously absent was Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, who was appointed to a place on Willkie's advisory board following the Philadelphia convention where she had worked hard for Thomas E. Dewey, Mrs. Simms, who has taken active part in New Mexican politics since her marriage to an Albuquerque banker and ranchman, frequently has disputed Republican leadership with McCormick.

EUROPE SHOULD SEE U. S. AT WORK, WILLKIE DECLARES

Rulers Would Never Attack America if They Did He Tells Phoenix, Ariz. Crowd at Stadium.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 18 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie said today that if Europe's rulers "could look across the ocean and see a great people at work," they never would attack the United States.

Calling for national unity, Willkie told an audience in Phoenix High School stadium that it is as necessary to revitalize domestic economy as it is to build a strong defense.

The Republican presidential nominee came by a chartered plane from Albuquerque, N. M., where he spoke last night.

Willkie spoke under a broiling sun. The bleachers, with a capacity of 10,500, were filled.

"Every place I have been," the nominee said, "the crowds that have come to see me have exceeded even the most exaggerated predictions that had been given me.

"The thing that gratifies me the most is that here in free, untouched America, democracy is working so vigorously.

"We must build a force of airplanes and armament so strong that no dictator will dare to strike. But that will not be adequate to carry America through this trying time. We must rehabilitate our domestic economy."

Declaring the administration wanted "to sabotage American industry," the nominee drew laughter from the sunbaked crowd by remarking, "every shirt I see, every suit I see is simply saturated with hidden taxes."

His plane took off at 12:27 p. m. for Riverside, Cal. and two others carrying his advisers and newspapermen followed immediately.

WILLKIE'S SPEECH AT ALBUQUERQUE

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH WILLKIE AIR PARTY, Sept. 18.—Wendell L. Willkie continued today his line of attack on the New Deal and President Roosevelt, making it more sulphurous as he progressed deeper into the West where Roosevelt's strength is supposedly great.

He left his special train at Albuquerque, N. M., to fly to Phoenix, the only stop on the way to Riverside, Cal.

At Albuquerque Willkie had gone directly from his train to a floodlighted ball park where a crowd of some 15,000—the largest political city in the history of the State, according to Republican claims—waited to hear him pour out his wrath on the administration at Washington.

He accused the "Tommy Corcorans and the Benny Cohens" of going on a spending orgy that made the profligacy of the Kings of France and the Rajahs of Persia look cheap by comparison.

"If you re-elect Roosevelt," said Willkie, "you also reappoiint the Tommy Corcorans and the Benny Cohens who have run around for ten years throwing monkey wrenches into the economic machinery of the United States and they have done it so effectively that in seven years they have added 25 billions to the public debt and spent 60 billions and there isn't a man, woman or child in this audience who, by spending the same amount, couldn't have accomplished as much."

Cheers and Applause.

When he paused after such crackling blasts at the New Deal, his audience, massed in bleachers and crowded on the baseball field, responded with cheers and applause. As at Tulsa, Ok., where he addressed a similar large open-air crowd, the G. O. P. candidate spoke extemporaneously, developing the by now familiar themes of Roosevelt failure and ruin.

Bowling along in his own free-hand style, Willkie at times makes remarkable statements. He tells each audience that the rich cannot pay for New Deal spending. If every income of more than $5000 were confiscated, he says, it still wouldn't be enough.

"The rich always take care of themselves," he said to the crowd last night. "The cost of government comes out of your faces."

Seated on the platform immediately behind him were several of the wealthy angels of the Republican party in New Mexico, where politics usually resolves itself into a simple matter of dollars and cents. Among the G. O. P. benefactors taking a prominent part in last night's rally was Cyrus McCormick, national committeeman for New Mexico, and a member of a wealthy family.

Conspicuously absent was Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, who was appointed to a place on Willkie's advisory board following the Philadelphia convention where she had worked hard for Thomas E. Dewey. Mrs. Simms, who has taken active part in New Mexican politics since her marriage to an Albuquerque banker and ranchman, frequently has disputed Republican leadership with McCormick.

Willkie's back-platform appearances at small New Mexican towns were highly informal, as though he realized that the chances of carrying the State were slim indeed. At one stop where an interpreter supplied Spanish for the Spanish-speaking part of the audience as Willkie talked, Willkie told the crowd that he had lived in Puerto Rico and had once known enough Spanish to order a meal and make love.

At Mountainair, a way station in the foothills, he asked his listeners if they had any questions to ask. A man close to the platform held up a handful of beans and asked Willkie if he knew what they were. When he replied in the negative, he was told that they were pinto beans, the source of income of most farmers in the region.

Recently it was reported on the train that the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation offered to buy 100,000 sacks of pinto beans at a price of $3.50 while only $2.50 was offered to farmers in a glutted market. There would be a few votes for Willkie among the pinto bean farmers, it was agreed.

Elections in New Mexico not infrequently end in bitterly contested charges of corruption. Such a row is now going on following the Democratic primary in which Senator Dennis Chavez edged out Representative John J. Dempsey in the senatorial race by only 2000 votes. Dempsey has called on the FBI to come to his aid. A year ago some of Chavez' relatives were indicted in connection with a WPA scandal.

Bantering With Reporters.

Willkie appeared tireless yesterday, his capacity for crowds insatiable. After his night meeting at Albuquerque he held a brief press conference in a crowded hotel ballroom which produced little significant news but gave Willkie an opportunity to banter with reporters as he is fond of doing. After that he attended a reception for local Republicans given by the McCormicks.

Yesterday and today he hit again and again at the third term and the "indispensable man," telling his audiences that while Roosevelt might regard himself as the one man to save the country, he, Willkie, was not a remarkable fellow merely one of thousands of men who were fitted to be President. Any argument that could be used in behalf of a third term, said Willkie, also could be used in support of a fourth term.

DUCHESS PROTESTS TO U. S. AGAINST NAZIS IN LUXEMBOURG

Asserts Germany Has Violated International Law, Broken Treaties.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg protested to the United States and other nations today against the "wrong which the (German) Reich is committing in regard to this peaceful little country."

The protest was filed with the State Department and foreign missions here by the Luxembourg legation in behalf of the Grand Duchess, now exiled in Portugal.

Her husband, Prince Felix, and their children recently came to the United States and are now living on Long Island. The Grand Duchess, it was reported, may join them there soon.

The protest charged that Germans now occupying the country had prohibited the use of the French language, abolished the Constitution, released public officials from their oath of loyalty to the Grand Duchess and taken other steps "in violation of international law and of the treaties and promises given by Germany."

CLARK GABLE'S FIRST WIFE SUES TO DROP HIS NAME

Petition Says She Has Had to Use It in Business Dealings Against Her Wish.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18 (AP).—To dispel any impression that she is attempting to trade on the famous name, Clark Gable's first wife, Mrs. Josephine Dillon Gable, is seeking a court order to have her maiden name restored.

She and Gable, now the husband of actress Carole Lombard, were divorced in 1930. Since then, her petition said, she has been required to use the Gable name in business dealings, creating "the impression that I was attempting to exploit the name, but the reverse is true."

She is a voice and dramatic arts teacher. Her petition says she also lectures, makes radio appearances and is a part-time Christian College faculty member at Columbia, Mo.

JACKSON'S AIDS NOT TO OPPOSE MILLIGAN

Attorney-General's Office Says It Won't Object to Appointment to Former Post.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—A Department of Justice official said today Attorney-General Jackson would not oppose appointment of Maurice Milligan as United States Attorney at Kansas City, an office he resigned to become an unsuccessful Democratic primary opponent of Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri.

Truman, who won nomination for another term over Milligan and Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri, announced last week he had recommended Milligan be restored to his old position. As District Attorney, Milligan prosecuted Tom Pendergast, Kansas City Democratic boss, for income tax evasion.

TOKYO DEMANDS A SHOWDOWN AT INDO-CHINA TALKS

Japanese Declare They Have Had Enough Quibbling — Envoy Says He Has 'Final' Instructions.

By A. T. STEELE

The Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1940.

HANOI, Indo-China, Sept. 18.—Since the return yesterday of Gen. Tominago from Tokyo with "new and final" instructions it has become plain that the Japanese have decided to force a quick showdown in the negotiations here. The Japanese declare they have had enough quibbling on details and want a prompt yes or no answer—or else. At the same time they are assiduously spreading rumors of their intention to suspend the negotiations and to evacuate Japanese nationals if the reply to their terms is unsatisfactory.

This is the third showdown by actual count since the conversations began. Twice before the Japanese packed their bags and made threatening gestures. But the politically dexterous French, knowing the Japanese, are keenly aware of the advantages of accomplishing an anschluss by agreement instead of by force, and have refused to be bulldozed.

Now it looks as if decision cannot longer be averted. The Japanese lost too much face by their previous bluffing tactics to back down again. The odds are still favorable toward compromise. The main issues have been agreed on, the disputed points being supplementary questions such as the method to be used in troop passage, what airports and what harbor to assign to the Japanese.

The ill humor of the Japanese militarists has been aggravated by the fact that every day's delay is enabling the Chinese better to prepare their defenses on the Indo-China border. Travelers report destruction of the Yunnan railway on the Chinese side of the frontier well started. The tracks and steel ties are being removed to Kunming, the capital of Yunnan Province, where they will be relaid for a new railway northward toward the Yangtze.

Vichy Rejects Siam's Demand for Part of French Indo-China.

VICHY, France, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Petain Government has rejected a demand by the Government of Thailand (Siam) for territorial concessions in French Indo-China, it was disclosed yesterday.

The Foreign Office, in reply to the Thailand demand, declared that France was "resolved to defend the territorial integrity of Indo-China in all circumstances and against all foreign enterprises."

Thailand presented its demand at Vichy at a time when negotiations for defining the frontier between Indo-China and Thailand were proceeding. A French communique said negotiations appeared to be going along satisfactorily, therefore France "was taken by surprise" by the move. The disputed area is along the Mekong River.

30 DRAFT BOARDS, TWO APPEAL BODIES PLANNED FOR CITY

the order in which registrants will be called on to file questionnaires containing elaborate personal information.

After these are filed, the registrants will be given opportunity to present claims for exemption. Then the ward boards will classify all those who have registered, according to availability for service, and those who wish to appeal will be given the opportunity to do so. Only after that will the ward boards pick men for induction into service, out of those not exempted or deferred. This choice will be in order of serial numbers as drawn in the lottery.

Due to an official misunderstanding at Jefferson City when plans were first announced, it had been indicated that central supervisory draft boards would be established in St. Louis and Kansas City. It was learned today that there is no such plan. There may be some form of central board for the State in the administrative set-up, but this plan has not been determined finally.

173 to 175 Draft Boards.

Depending on the number finally established in St. Louis, there will be 173 or 175 draft boards throughout the State, including nine in St. Louis County. Outside of St. Louis and Kansas City these boards will be created in arbitrary districts for units of about 30,000 population, rather than by wards. Personnel of the boards chosen by Gov. Stark, will not be announced until approved by President Roosevelt.

The Adjutant-General's office at Jefferson City is awaiting a new set of regulations from the Army-Navy Selective Service Committee, due about Oct. 1, for further information about administrative handling of the draft following registration. Meanwhile the Governor has called on election boards or county clerks throughout Missouri to co-operate in supervising the registration. All persons working on the registration, including the six election officials in each precinct who have been requested to serve as registrars, will be expected to act without pay.

In the lack of accurate current census statistics, estimates of the number of Missourians who will be required to register vary widely, due to use of different methods of computation. The State draft officials have made an estimate of 532,000, while the Chamber of Commerce research bureau has figured it at 432,904. Similarly, estimates of those who will actually be called into service are at wide variance.

The Election Board will meet tomorrow to consider the handling of the draft registration.

BRITISH FOOD SUPPLY DAMAGE

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, declared today that the damage done by German air raids to Britain's food supply "is at most one day's consumption of a particular commodity."

Recent raids, he said, "obviously have been directed at our food supplies."

Boys Admit Snatching Purse.

Three boys between 10 and 12 years old admitted to police last night that they snatched a purse from Miss Erma Lawson, 4219 McPherson avenue, as she was walking in the 400 block of Whittier avenue. They were arrested after police found one of them crouching behind an ashpit in the rear of a home in the 4200 block of Westminster place. The purse, containing $31, was recovered from a parked automobile into which the boys had thrown it.

FLAT FEET POOR EXCUSE IF YOU HAVE A TRIGGER FINGER

Web Toes Won't Matter in Draft, If You Can Chew With 12 Teeth.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP).—If, since conscription became an actuality, you have been regarding your flat feet as an asset instead of a liability, it might be well to give a little study to the army's requirements for civilian recruiting.

Flat feet are no excuse if and when you are called for a year's training. And, for that matter, neither are any of several other physical defects.

For example—you're eligible for limited service even if both ears are gone, all your teeth are missing and you can see out of only one eye. Web toes, a floating kidney, chronic asthma, stuttering and two fingers missing from each hand won't keep you out.

Physical requirements for the general service are pretty elastic, too. They call for a minimum height of 5 feet, with no maximum, and a minimum weight of 107 pounds. You must have six incisor and six bicuspid teeth and a trigger finger.

The army explains that the machinery of mechanized warfare provides places where the physically handicapped may become as useful as anyone else.

Roosevelt Order on Draft Regulations Is Awaited

ly to have been promised an important new administration post, is known to be intensely interested in the progress of the defense program. Gen. Gullion was chief of the mobilization division, office of the Provost Marshal-General, in the national selective service organization of 1917.

The draft director will receive $10,000 a year.

Nucleus of Organization.

The joint army and navy Selective Service Committee, which prepared the six volumes of regulations now being adapted for promulgation by the President, is slated to become the nucleus of the national conscription organization.

This national organization would formally be called into being by the promulgation of the first two volumes of regulations. The four remaining volumes, to be made effective as needed, concern classification and selection of men for service, delivery and induction of men into the army, finance and physical standards for trainees.

Meanwhile, in a move to enlist public support for conscription, the army's selective service officers disclosed adoption of a fixed policy to give full publicity to every step in the draft process.

The names of men who register, the order in which they become liable for service in the subsequent draft lottery and the names of men whose service is deferred will be published and broadcast to the fullest extent. The public scrutiny is expected to discourage any draft abuses or "chiseling."

More Debt Relief Sought.

The War Department sought quick action on legislation affording more debt relief to citizen soldiers. Maj. Edwin Barber of the general staff told the House Military Committee yesterday that the morale of the new soldiers was involved and recommended a revision of the 1918 Soldiers and Sailors' Civil Relief Act to broaden its terms.

Officials emphasized that the proposal would grant no automatic moratorium on debts. In general, the War Department plan would grant courts wide discretion to halt foreclosures and evictions, treating each case on its merits. The veterans' administration would be empowered similarly to deal with cases of insurance premiums which the soldier was unable to pay.

The soldier would not be freed of his obligation to pay after he returned to civilian life.

PENNSYLVANIA CENSORS BAN ONE REEL OF "THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH"

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (AP)

ONE reel of the motion picture "The Ramparts We Watch," was barred today by the Pennsylvania Board of Censors as "objectionable" because "it is part of the fear propaganda being disseminated by Germany."

Mrs. Edna R. Carroll of Philadelphia, the board chairman, said the Pennsylvania ruling applied only to the final reel, which, she said, the producers had substituted shortly before the picture was to be given a trial showing in Harrisburg and Reading, Pa., today.

The picture in its original form was approved by the board Aug. 9.

After viewing the double reel put in to replace the final section of the five-reel picture, produced by "The March of Time" and released through RKO, Mrs. Carroll announced:

"We have found the final reel objectionable because it was made in Germany and because it is part of the fear propaganda being disseminated by Germany. It is also contrary to the morals and customs of this country."

AXIS CONFERENCE ON DESTROYER DEAL EXPECTED AT ROME

ian participation in the war, and the Ribbentrop visit is likely to clarify to what extent, if any, Germany is to assist in the attempted conquest of Egypt.

That German troops are ready to go to colonial areas is generally known. Vaccinations of volunteers for possible colonial service has been an order of the day. The presence of German mechanized volunteers in Ethiopia has also been disclosed in the German press.

With the European continent in the hands of the Axis, Nazi sources declare Germany has troops to spare even after allowing for the maximum number considered necessary in the event of an invasion of Britain.

Moreover, Germany, until the outbreak of the war, enjoyed unusually close commercial relations with Egypt. The Egyptian Chamber of Commerce in Germany was one of the most active of the accredited foreign chambers.

Significantly, the German press now speaks of the invasion of Egypt as a battle for that country's liberation.

"This isn't a peacetime visit," one source said. "In times like this, when top Axis statesmen meet, concrete results are bound to ensue. Many events have taken place since Count Ciano came to Vienna three weeks ago."

As an afterthought he added: "Events move very rapidly nowadays—everybody is in a hurry for a decision."

"Keeping Each Other Posted."

"It is the traditional Axis policy to keep each other posted on all plans and moves," informed German sources said. They added significantly that, under the present conditions, "new problems are likely to arise every three weeks or so," indicating that more frequent contacts may be found necessary.

The last meeting of the German and Italian Foreign Ministers was in Vienna, last month. They met then to discuss phases of the Rumanian and Hungarian dispute over Transylvania.

U. S. DEBT PASSES 44 BILLION NOT INCLUDING DEFENSE NEEDS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Federal debt passed 44 billion dollars today before the Treasury had begun huge borrowings for national defense.

The Treasury said that out of its 45 billion dollar limit on borrowing for general purposes, it had exhausted $44,061,821,728. Several additional millions of the borrowing power also were reserved to cover the automatically increasing value of baby bonds.

This indicated that most of the Treasury's borrowing in coming months would be confined to the special four billion dollar borrowing authority given it by Congress for national defense purposes. Since the present fiscal year started July 1 the Treasury has increased its debt by $1,094,290,690. Compared with a year ago, the debt was up about $3,200,000,000.

FOUR PLANE FABRIC FIRMS DENY PRICE-FIXING CHARGE

Six Executives of Indicted Concerns Plead Not Guilty in Anti-Trust Law Conspiracy Case.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Four airplane fabric manufacturing firms and six of their executives pleaded not guilty today when arraigned in United States District Court on an indictment charging conspiracy to fix prices in violation of the anti-trust laws.

The indictment, issued by a special Federal grand jury investigating war industries, alleged that the defendants conspired to impose "arbitrary, artificial, and rigid prices" for a type of fabric used in army and navy planes.

The defendants are Wellington Sears & Co., New York, and three of its executives; Suncook Mills, New York and Suncook, N. H., and two executives; Thurston Cutting Corporation, New York and one officer, and Air Associates, Garden City, N. Y.

SEWER DISTRICT IN COUNTY VOTES $81,000 BOND ISSUE

An issue of $81,000 in bonds for the district's share of the cost of constructing a $324,000 sewer system was authorized in the Walton Road Sanitary Sewer District, St. Louis County, yesterday by a vote of 653 to 119. A grant of $243,000 from the WPA will be sought for the remainder of the cost. Dr. F. G. Bickel, Joseph D. Rebstock and Edgar W. Hurst were elected trustees.

Residents of the Vinita Terrace Sewer District voted 89 to 13 to issue $10,500 in bonds to construct a sewer system. The issue represents the total estimated cost of construction. William Schmieder, A. J. Rose and Robert W. Bates were elected trustees.

Does Your Breath Broadcast—"I WEAR FALSE TEETH"?

Play Safe—Be Sure—Use Polident

People who wear plates or bridges often suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it—but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing may not prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing that definitely stops "denture breath" is daily use of Polident! This new brushless cleaner has won the approval of thousands of dentists and users. Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tarnish and food deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 30¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if not delighted.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Do this daily: Add a little Polident powder to ½ glass water. Stir. Then put in plate or bridge for 10 to 15 minutes—Rinse—and it's ready to use!

MILLION LOSS TO ORCHARDISTS LISTED IN NOVA SCOTIA GALE

50 Vessels in Lobster Fleet Sunk, Cut Grain Crops Destroyed in Monday Storm.

HALIFAX, Sept. 18 (AP).—Battered by one of the fiercest storms in years, Maritime Province communities worked at restoration today while agriculturists and fishermen counted up a heavy loss in products and equipment.

Orchardists of Nova Scotia's rich Annapolis valley estimated the gale Monday night cost them $1,000,000, flailing 600,000 barrels of apples from the trees just as they were to be picked.

Cut grain crops in many districts were destroyed, either swept up by the wind that raged at between 40 and 70 miles an hour or washed out by a pelting downpour of rain.

Fifty of 52 vessels in a lobster fleet at Cape Bald, N. B., were sunk. Fifteen of the crew of the British freighter Incemore, aground on Anticosti Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, were taken off last night before the weather prevented further rescue operations.

O'CONNOR, TRYING COMEBACK, LOSES IN NEW YORK VOTE

Former Congressman, Retired at Roosevelt's Behest, Fails in Contests on Two Tickets.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 18 (AP).—Voters in New York's primary elections yesterday blocked the comeback effort of former Representative John J. O'Connor, anti-New Deal Democrat defeated for renomination in 1938 at President Roosevelt's behest.

Amid relatively light balloting, a big majority of incumbents won redesignations to Congress and the State Legislature, including James H. Fay, who by an approximate 2-to-1 majority, for the second time defeated O'Connor for the Democratic nomination from New York City's Sixteenth District. O'Connor's entry in the Republican primary also failed.

Final unofficial figures gave Fay 7991; O'Connor 4034.

Chief interest centered on O'Connor's dual bid for nomination, an American Labor party squabble over support of the President for a third term and successful Republican organization efforts to renominate proved upstate vote getters to strengthen the national ticket in November.

Early returns, all from New York City and three bordering counties, gave a right-wing faction of the A. L. P. which nominated electors supporting a third term, a slight edge over left wingers opposing Roosevelt's re-election.

Elsewhere, Representative Hamilton Fish, incumbent since 1919 and New Deal opponent of long standing, won overwhelming Republican designation in the Twenty-sixth District, which includes the Roosevelt home county of Dutchess.

Fish defeated efforts of both a formal opponent and a surprise write-in candidate advanced in protest against the Congressman's vain attempt to cause a 60-day postponement of conscription.

Gov. Saltonstall's Opponent to be Attorney-General Dever.

BOSTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Republican Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, renominated without opposition, and Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, overwhelming winner of a bitter Democratic primary fight, squared off today as rival candidates for chief executive of Massachusetts in the November elections.

Twice chosen as the Bay State's chief law enforcement officer and the sole Democratic State officer to survive a G. O. P. landslide two years ago, Dever won in every section of the State over Francis E. Kelly, who defeated Saltonstall for Lieutenant-Governor in the 1936 campaign.

Complete unofficial returns from the State's 1771 precincts gave Dever 238,615 and Kelly 122,905.

United States Senator David I. Walsh, Democratic chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, was renominated without opposition, and will run in the elections against Henry Parkman, a former corporation counsel for the city of Boston, who won the G. O. P. senatorial indorsement without aparty fight.

Connecticut G. O. P. Nominates Paul L. Cornell for Senate.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 18 (AP).—Paul L. Cornell of Washington, Conn., who became a preparatory school owner after gaining financial independence in the advertising field, was chosen today by Connecticut Republicans as their candidate for the United States Senate. He was chosen at a State convention.

Cornell, 44 years old, was nominated by acclamation after the withdrawal of rivals, including former Lieutenant-Governor Clifford B. Wilson.

In the November election he will oppose Senator Francis T. Maloney, Democrat. Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, 47-year-old one-term chief executive, was renominated, also by acclamation.

100,000 VOLUNTEERS SOUGHT TO AID COURT REFORM PLAN

Backers Wanted to Explain to Voters Proposal to Take Selection of Judges Out of Politics.

The Missouri Institute for Administration of Justice, a state-wide organization of laymen and lawyers sponsoring the Non-Partisan Court Plan, designed to remove selection of judges from political influence, is seeking 100,000 volunteers to aid in the campaign for adoption of the plan through constitutional changes, which will be submitted to voters in the general election Nov. 5 as Propositions 3 and 4.

William W. Crowdus, executive director of the institute, said volunteers were needed to explain the plan to voters in the State's 4431 precincts and to work in the precincts election day. Committees to supervise the campaign have been formed in 101 of the State's 114 counties. Persons offering their services should communicate with the institute's State headquarters, 1722 Boatmen's Bank Building, telephone CEntral 1330.

Floods in Southeastern France.

GRENOBLE, France, Sept. 18 (AP).—Floods today caused heavy losses in cattle and household goods in Isere and Savoy departments, Southeastern France. A cloudburst caused the Isere River and its tributaries to overflow. The town of Poncharra was inundated.

ANTI-NEW DEALER WINS WISCONSIN RACE FOR SENATE

Cudahy Trails Two Roosevelt Opponents—F. H. Clausen Nominated—Heavy Republican Vote.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Republicans, who could muster only 126,034 votes six years ago and ran third to the Progressives and Democrats, pushed into a wide lead in total ballots cast in yesterday's Wisconsin primary.

Returns from 2826 of 3034 precincts gave Gov. Julius P. Heil, and his opponent for the Republican re-nomination an aggregate of 330,389.

The G. O. P. total was a continuance of the four-year comeback from the 1934 ebb. In the 1936 primary, the Republicans counted 166,000 votes, nosing out the Democrats for second place. They passed the Progressives two years later, polling 213,906 and in the general election returned to power by defeating Gov. Philip F. La Follette (Prog.) and sending Alexander Wiley to the United States Senate in place of a New Dealer.

James E. Finnegan, an opponent of the third term for President Roosevelt, won the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. Another New Deal opponent was runner-up, while Ambassador John Cudahy, entered at the eleventh hour by Roosevelt leaders, was a poor fourth.

The Republicans nominated Fred H. Clausen, Horicon farm machinery manufacturer. Senator Robert M. La Follette was without opposition on the Progressive ticket.

Although Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican National Program Committee and former University of Wisconsin president, was killed Sunday while on an automobile campaign trip. Many voters cast their ballots for him. His name was third with seven entered.

Heil was renominated by a 2 to 1 margin. Francis E. McGovern, a Roosevelt supporter, captured the Democratic nomination for Governor, while Progressive designation went to Orland S. Loomis, former State Attorney-General.

Four Republican Representatives in Congress who had opposition appeared to have won renomination. Three others, together with two Progressives, had no opposition. All three parties nominated for the Third District vacancy.

SENATE COMMITTEE LOOKING INTO NEW MEXICO ELECTION

Investigators Sent After Charges of Manipulation and Withholding of Returns.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Chairman Gillette (Dem.), Iowa, announced today that the Senate Campaign Committee was sending investigators to New Mexico as a result of complaints by supporters of Representative John J. Dempsey that "returns were manipulated in Dempsey's election contest with Senator Dennis Chavez for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Gillette said supporters of Dempsey had telephoned and telegraphed that "retaurns were manipulated and purposely withheld and handled in such a way as to affect the results of the primary."

Gillette said the committee investigation would be independent of any undertaken by Department of Justice agents.

2000 CHICAGO CITY WORKERS ON RAT-KILLING CAMPAIGN

Aiming at Thorough Drive, With Poison Fatal to Rodents and Harmless to Other Animals.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP).—An army of 2000 city workers set out today through Chicago's streets, alleys and back yards on a rat-killing crusade.

Oscar E. Hewitt, Commissioner of Public Works, said it was expected to be the most thorough such drive in the city's history. The workers used a poison lethal to rats but harmless to other animals.

Rat experts figure there are at least as many rats in Chicago as human beings—more than 3,000,000—and that in addition to being a health menace cause damage of some $7,000,000 a year.

American Buys Yacht in Hope Of Getting Home From England

Aircraft Engineering Firm Director, Barred From British Liner by Neutrality Law, Plans Crossing in 160-Ton Racer.

(Copyright, 1940.)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Henry B. Clarke, an American and a director of Clarke Aircraft Products, Ltd., aeronautical engineers of Derby, wants to go home.

Unable to book passage on the Pan-American clippers from Lisbon, which have a four-month waiting list, and barred by the United States Neutrality Law from sailing on a British liner, Clarke has solved the problem by purchasing the 160-ton racing yacht Noroit from Earl Beatty, son of Britain's naval hero of the last war.

Clarke hopes to put out of Dartmouth, Devonshire, for the United States Friday, by way of Bermuda to Canada. He is looking for four able-bodied Americans to sign on, with a professional British crew, and work the Noroit across the Atlantic. Passage won't cost the Americans a cent.

Clarke has permission of the British Ministry of Shipping to take the Noroit out of these waters because the craft is not regarded as possessing military value. But his passport has not been validated by the American Embassy for travel through the dangerous combat zone, and it is unlikely that the Embassy will grant such validation if he applies for it.

It is understood to be Clarke's intention to release the British members of his crew at Bermuda or at a Canadian port. He is insistent on having Americans for the four vacant berths in the crew because of the possibility that the Noroit might be stopped and searched by a German submarine on the way over and some of its complement taken prisoner.

The Noroit is a 119-foot craft of 20-foot beam and six-foot draft. Should the sails be carried away or a calm set in, the yacht has an 80-horsepower Diesel engine to push it on.

The pilot was quoted as saying that grain warehouses and docks which had been burning three days also seemed to have burned out, leaving large expanses of embers and ashes, while more recently attacked warehouses and oil tanks were burning furiously.

Great Activity on Thames.

"Despite the pounding, a German report reported "extraordinarily lively" shipping on the Thames which was interpreted here as an indication that the British were making every effort to save as much material as possible from burning warehouses.

German press reports described conditions of growing confusion in London and speculated on possible indications of social and governmental collapse under the steady bombings.

"How long?" Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter asked, adding: "Churchill is prepared to keep his word—to convert London into a heap of wreckage. . . . The question arises whether the English people will, or how long they will, follow Churchill along this course."

Meager comment on Churchill's address in the House of Commons yesterday indicated that Germans are resigned to the unchangeable disposition of the British Prime Minister to carry the war to its end.

Back-to-Wall Speech.

Informed Germans say that the Wilhelmstrasse regards Churchill as at bay. They described his talk as that of a man in a fighting mood—but with his back to the wall.

The newspaper Allgemeine Zeitung said Churchill spoke "in a whining manner" of the bombing of Buckingham Palace.

"Buckingham Palace to us is no specially holy place," the paper observed. "Home is home. The King is in better position to get a new home than the worker who lives in London's slums."

SUIT TO ENJOIN FIRM HEAD FROM USING ASSETS DROPPED

The suit of Marshall Harris of Ferguson, vice-president of International-Pictorial, Inc., to enjoin Floyd W. Bolton of Albuquerque, N. M., president, from using company assets was dismissed by Harris yesterday at his own cost. His counsel said it was decided to drop the suit after further investigation indicated Bolton was not using assets.

When the suit was filed Saturday, Bolton, in St. Louis to demonstrate a coin-operated movie projector made by Phono-Film, Inc., said the musical films demonstrated were not in any way connected with assets of International-Pictorial. The demonstration, at a downtown tavern, was of short sound movies designed to cause customers to linger at bars. The injunction suit was directed also against Phono-Film, Mrs. Frances F. Hatfield, 6019 McPherson avenue, and her daughter, Miss Jane Francis, who appeared in several of the movies.

BILL TO TAX BONDS CALLED VIOLATION OF STATES RIGHTS

Austin Says It Would Transgress on Powers of Commonwealths to Raise Money.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Senator Austin (Rep.), Vermont, declared today that a proposal to eliminate tax exemptions on Federal, state and local securities transgressed on a fundamental right of states and municipalities to raise money without interference by the Federal Government.

Austin argued that the proposal, offered by Senator Brown (Dem.), Michigan, as an amendment to the excess profits tax bill, held implications of "a completely centralized form of Federal Government."

Replying to Austin, Brown declared that much of the Federal debt was held by wealthy persons who to that extent were relieved of paying income taxes.

"From the standpoint of tax justice," he said, "it should not be permitted. Our tax falls heavier on the poor man and lighter on the rich man."

National Debt.

Senator Bailey (Dem.), North Carolina, told the Senate that this government "now is in sight of a national debt of 75 billion dollars and that is more of a menace to the welfare of the American people than any possible foreign invasion."

He spoke in opposing Brown's proposal, saying that because of tax exemptions the Federal Government could obtain a low interest rate on the huge national debt.

As the Senate resumed debate on the intricate excess profits tax bill, Austin, assistant Republican leader, sought to rally bipartisan opposition to the no-tax-exemption rider.

"This thing hits at the very fundamentals of our dual system of Federal and state governments," Austin told reporters. "When you touch the purse strings of state and local governments, you have destroyed their powers to tax and to exist."

Explanation by Brown.

Brown disagreed that vital governmental relations were involved. He said that Congress already had granted the states the right to impose income taxes on salaries of Federal employes and that it had exercised the same right in levying Federal taxes on state salaries. Under the amendment state governments could tax Federal securities and vice versa.

The general opinion in the Senate, however, was that even if the chamber voted to end present tax-exemption provisions, House conferees would block action when the bill is sent to a joint committee for adjustment of differences.

Austin said he regarded the tax bill rider as the "biggest issue of the session" because it was a move toward totalitarianism.

"This is getting us into the heart of the world revolution," he said. "We're all that's left to keep the bulwarks of the republican form of government."

Half Hour for Each Senator.

The Senate worked under a debate limitation agreement in an effort to speed a final vote on the excess profits measure. It limtied each Senator to a single 30-minute speech on amendments and the bill.

Two other controversial amendments also waited action. One by Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas, would set up a stiff schedule of wartime income taxes to be effective when Congress declared war. The second by Senator Lee (Dem.), Oklahoma, proposed a broad system of "drafting wealth" in case of war.

The House, in its third day of recess out of respect to the late Speaker William Bankhead, was scheduled to resume sessions tomorrow.

GANDHI TO SEEK RIGHT TO DIRECT ANTI-WAR DRIVE

Nationalist Leader Pledges, However, He Will Not Embarass Britain — Against Nazi Victory.

BOMBAY, Sept. 18 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, once more undisputed leader of India's main nationalist movement, has taken over the task of directing anti-war propaganda, but under a pledge that it shall not embarrass Britain.

Gandhi, who will be 71 years old Oct. 2, left for Wardna today after issuing instructions for complete discipline among his millions of followers pending an interview with the British Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow. He will seek permission to preach passive resistance to Britain and non-participation in the war.

The All-India Congress (nationalist party) Committee pledged that organization Monday not to embarrass Britain in its struggle with Germany, but at the same time to preach against war. The committee withdrew a conditional offer of co-operation with Britain and invited Gandhi, who had disagreed with the offer, to resume the leadership "in any action that should be taken."

Gandhi followed up this delegation of power with an interview in the Bombay mansion of Rameshwar das Birla, multi-millionaire Indian industrialist and Congress sympathizer.

"Because non-violence is a Congress creed involving Congress' hostility to all war," he said, "it is a vital necessity that Congress not identify itself with any war. Hence my desire not to embarrass Britain was necessarily limited and conditioned by the counter-necessity for continued Congress existence.

"Therefore I promised that civil disobedience would be definitely restricted to freedom of speech, provided it is absolutely non-violent."

Gandhi indicated he would not "be at all pleased at the prospect of Nazi victory," and added:

"What terrifies me is that, as things are presently going, defeat of Nazi-ism must be bought at a terrific price—namely a superior Nazi-ism or brute force, call it what you will."

Reynolds extracted the fuses of two delayed action bombs, Talbot carried a bomb 200 yards by himself, Andrews exploded one, and Button was in charge of a group which excavated a bomb which exploded, killing five men.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 18.—Johnny Mize, 1939 National League batting king, strengthened his bid for the 1940 title by getting four hits in six trips to the plate and driving in six runs here this afternoon as the Cardinals walloped the Dodgers, 14 to 7, in their final meeting of the campaign.

The Dodgers took an early lead when Babe Phelps hit a homer with three on base off Lon Warneke in the first inning. Warneke was replaced by Carl Doyle in the fourth.

The Cardinals got back into the game in the third. After Brown singled and Moore walked, Slaughter doubled, scoring both runners, and took third when Phelps dropped the relay from the outfield. Mize then singled to drive in Slaughter with the third run of the inning.

Walker's second double and Medwick's double in the last half of the third made the score 5 to 3 in favor of Brooklyn.

The Cardinals, however, bunched five hits with an error to score five runs in the fifth and take the lead. Moore singled, Slaughter doubled, Casey relieved Head, Mize singled to drive in two more tallies, Koy singled and Orengo hit a home run, whereupon Tamulis replaced Casey and retired the side. The error was charged to Walker because of bad throw, allowing Mize to take an extra base.

Four more St. Louis runs crossed the plate in the eighth. Moore walked, Slaughter singled, sending Moore to third and Enos took second on the throw-in. Mize then singled for his fourth straight hit, scoring both runners. After Koy singled, Carleton replaced Tamulis on the hill and Orengo was intentionally passed, filling the bases. Marion's single drove in the other two tallies.

The Dodgers came back with two runs in their half on Medwick's double and Camilli's twenty-second home run of the year, but the Cards sealed the decision with two in the ninth on hits by Brown and Moore, Slaughter's fly and Mize's infield out, which was the sixth run batted in by him.

The attendance was estimated at 3500.

Bob Harris Pitches For Browns, Grove For the Red Sox

By J. Roy Stockton

SPORTSMAN'S PARG, Sept. 18.—Bob Harris, the Browns' young right-hander who has 10 victories and 13 defeats to show for his 1940 season, pitched in the opener of a two-game series with the Boston Red Sox here this afternoon.

His opponent was the veteran southpaw, Lefty Grove, who was seeking his eighth victory of the year. Grove has lost four games.

Johnny Lucadello, out of action yesterday because of illness, returned to the St. Louis lineup, which included Laabs in center and Hoag in right field. Both are right-handed hitters, sent in to strengthen the Brownie attack against Grove.

Before the game, those famous old Washington battery mates, Walter Johnson and Gabby Street, who caught him for many years, were reunited on the radio broadcast. Johnson and Street were presented with engraved cuff links by a group of St. Louis admirers.

The attendance was estimated at 1000.

HANEY'S MEN DO EVERYTHING WRONG AND LOSE TO YANKS

The Browns' winning streak of five straight was broken yesterday as the Yankees salvaged one decision out of a four-game series by taking the final contest, 9 to 0. In contrast to what happened in the other games, the Browns did everything wrong and the Yanks again reverted to championship ways.

Fred Haney's warriors, perhaps weary after knocking so many teams out of high places, crowded three errors into the first two innings and New York, bunching four hits with two walks and the Brownie misplays, quickly had a five-run lead.

As Atley Donald held the Browns to six hits, the game was a breeze for Joe McCarthy's team. Bill Trotter was knocked out of the box in the second inning, as much by misplays of his comrades as by New York bats, and Emil Bildilli, George Coffman and Johnny Whitehead also saw service before the thing ended.

Rip Radcliff, fighting for the league batting championship, moved back into first place by a cat's whisker. With two hits in three times at bat, while Joe DiMaggio was getting one out of two, Rip took the lead, with an average of .3499, compared to .3497 for DiMaggio.

Still Pitching at 53.

The New York Cuban Stars, one of the best semi-pro ball clubs in the country, have a pitcher, Tom Ruiz, who stars at 53.

FAIRMOUNT PARK, Sept. 18.—Maiden Dream and My Day, cofavorites, thrilled the crowd of 3500 with a prolonged stretch duel in the opening race of this afternoon's program. At the finish, Maiden Dream, with Johnny Juarez up, had only half a length to spare, while My Day likewise was hard pressed by Shuchor.

In the early running, My Day set the pace.

The track appeared faster than on any previous day of the meeting.

The result of the second race in which Money Hill outlasted Molida to win by a half-length, was held up 10 full minutes while the stewards debated a possible disqualification. Finally, when the official sign was hung up, the crowd accepted the verdict without any protest. One week ago the same stewards nullified the victory of the horse Can't Catch.

The stewards questioned Jockey Eddie Frazier, who rode Money Hill, after Merlin Fife, who had the mount on Molida, protested that he had suffered interference as the horses came through the stretch. The winner paid $14.20 for $2, while the favorite, Vanscount, finished third.

Rockhurst, a nine-year-old horse that hadn't won a race since 1937, came around the leader, Helmor, on the turn and won the third race handily at odds of 10 to 1. Rockhurst, owned by Senator Michael E. Casey of Kansas City, had started 15 times in the last two years and was never better than second.

Scottish Mary was a defeated favorite for the second time in two starts when seh wound up fourth to Droop in the fourth race.

Horseshoe Winner.

Milton Oberjuerge defeated June Vogt in a playoff, 50-41, to take the Lutheran Laymen's League Class B horseshoe tournament. Each had six victories and one defeat during regular round robin series.

DETROIT, Sept. 18 (AP).—Hank Greenberg hit his thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh home runs of the season, one with the bases loaded, as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 14 to 0, in the first game of a doubleheader here today.

Greenberg's first homer sent the Tigers off to a 4-0 lead.

Dick Bartell, safe on Fred Chapman's error; Barney McCosky, who singled, and Charley Gehringer, who walked, scored ahead of Greenberg when he knocked one of George Caster's pitches into the lower center field pavilion.

The Tigers added a fifth run on Pinky Higgins' single and a triple by Birdie Tebbetts.

Greenberg hit his thirty-seventh home run into the upper left field stands with the bases empty in the third to give Detroit a 6-0 lead.

A single by McCosky and a double by Gehringer added another Detroit run in the fourth, and 11 Tigers batted in a seven-run outburst in the fifth. Two singles by Pete Fox, singles by Tebbetts and Bartell and doubles by Gehringer, Higgins and Rudy York marked the assault. Caster continued pitching for Philadelphia with the Athletics trailing, 14-0. Bridges, after hurling six innings, was given a rest, Tom Seats taking over the Detroit mound duties.

PASSES ISSUED BY CHASE GIVE INDIANS VICTORY

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18 (AP).—Cleveland captured the first game of a doubleheader from Washington, 3 to 1, today behind the six-hit hurling of veteran Johnny Allen. The Indians' runs all came on free passes issued by Southpaw Kendall Chase in the second inning.

The crowd was about 5000.

The Indians took a 3-0 lead in the second inning as Chase lost his control and walked in three runs after the bases were loaded by Bell's single, a pass to Mack and Pytlak's slow roller which went for a single. Trosky ended the inning by flying to deep center field.

The Senators got back a run in the fourth as Case beat out a bunt for the first hit off Allen, went to third on Lewis' single and scored as Walker grounded into a double play.

The Nats' southpaw hurler settled down, meanwhile, and retired the Indians in order through the fifth, except for a fourth-inning pass to Chapman with two out.

Allen, meanwhile, set the Senators back without much trouble—the only inning they made two hits off him was the fourth—and wound up with his ninth victory against eight deefats.

White Sox Beat Yanks Before 35,000.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox whipped the New York Yankees, 6 to 3, today, in the first game of a doubleheader, as Lefty Thornton Lee parceled out six hits. About 35,000 cheered the Sox, who bunched four of their runs in the sixth inning.

Why Mr. Landry, How Could You?

THE National Boxing Association convention in Milwaukee last week was a success . . . Which reminds one of that oldtimer: "The operation was a success but the patient died" . . . The convention was a success but it didn't accomplish anything . . . It named new officers . . . But it couldn't put over the big job—getting California, New York and Pennsylvania into the fold . . . You can't expect to run a boxing or a presidential campaign without one or all of these states.

Good Passers Plentiful On Football Squads of The Bears and Billikens

Football followers who attend the St.. Louis University and Washington University games this year will, it appears certain, see some sort of an aerial circus. Both squads are loaded with passers and fast stepping halfbacks with nimble fingers.

At Washington, any backfield combination Coach Frank Loebs decides to use will include two or three passers. Six forward pass tossers are on the Bruin roster.

Of course Wilson (Bud) Schwenk will be the outstanding threat for the Red and Green. The others are Joe Ady, Jack Roehlk, Allen Lindow, George Kowalchuk and Henry (Dutch) Lutz.

Coach Dukes Duford at St. Louis U. has four fine passers, headed by Mel Aussieker and Dick Weber, Emmett Rensing and Dick Pfuhl are the others.

One drawback to a passing attack for either eleven is the lack of end material. Washington has two fine pass catching ends with another due next week. Clarence Turley, from the 1939 varsity, and Bill Pufalt from the frosh, are both fine receivers, while Dick Devine, an all-district end from Webster Croves, who does the 100-yard dash in 10 flat, will report next week.

A total of 37 men have checked out equipment at Washington.

St. Louis appears to be suffering from a lack of numbers, only 29 players being listed.

"WHY do you call that guy Pat Comiskey Irish?" grumbled the Old Timer. "It sounds as Polish as all hek."

"Well, he fights Irish, no matter how he sounds," was the comeback. "And he wears the map of Erin for a frontispiece. He really can hit, too. But he broke his hand on Steve Dudas and had to lay up. He'll give Baer plenty."

Fact is, Baer's too old and Pat's too young for the affair to amount to much . . . And Jack Dempsey is telling it around that the fight will be a loser . . . "That guarantee of $30,000 to Baer will wreck the show, which can't draw a gate of $50.000 in Jersey City," Jack believes.

DEMPSEY, in Des Moines, told a reporter that he was through fighting wrestlers . . . That means through fighting everybody or anybody . . . "We all make mistakes once," said Jack . . . And the inference is that he'll not make the same one again.

Jack is back in the referee circuit . . . He handled the Lee Savold-Andy Miller fight at Des Moines and presented the knockout winner, Savold, with a trophy . . . Savold was to have fought Godoy for this occasion . . . But he wanted a New York referee of his own naming . . . Dempsey would not do for him . . . The match was dropped.

CAMP PERRY, O., Sept. 18 (AP).—The United States Coast Guard gave the Cavalry, Marines and Infantry a shooting lesson with the service rifle yesterday at the national matches, defeating 72 other eight-man squads in a problem of surprise targets at ranges from 200 to 600 yards.

The Coast Guard crew scored 560 points to take the laurels, Ohio's National Guard finishing second with 539. Next came the Cavalry with 535, Oregon National Guard with 533, and the Missouri Civilians with 527.

U.S. Team, Cubans Play to Tie

HAVANA, Sept. 18 (AP).—The United States and Cuba tied at 2-2 in an 11-inning pitchers' battle yesterday in the "world series" of amateur baseball before a crowd of 15,000 at Tropical Stadium. Darkness ended the game, second of a doubleheader. In the opener, Venezuela trounced Mexico, 6-1, behind the two-hit pitching of Kinsler.

Although Robert Carlson of Burlington, Vt., the United States starting pitcher, gave only one hit, Cuba scored both its runs off him in the first three innings. He issued three bases on balls in the first inning and a fly drove in the first run. In the third, Carlson was taken out after Artega had singled but the second run scored before Frank Overmire of Grand Rapids, Mich., could retire the side. Overmire allowed seven hits in the nine innings he pitched.

The United States scored its first run in the fourth on singles by Joe Donough of Woburn, Mass., and Lew Athanas of Laconia, N. H., and a Cuban error. The visitors tied the score in the sixth when Donough bunted and reached second on an error by Cuba's pitcher, Hechevarria, took third on a sacrifice by Bill Reynolds of Springfield, Ill., and scored on a single by Jim Dyer of Dover, Me.

Curlee Girls, Hollywoods Win

The second game of the two-out-of-three game final series for the American Softball Association national title, will be played at South Side Park tonight, with the defending champion Curlee Girls opposing the Tomboy Stores at 7:30 o'clock, and the Hollywoods and Griesediecks meeting in the men's nightcap.

The Curlee Girls, seeking their fifth A. S. A. title, defeated the Tomboys in the first game of the series last night, 8 to 4, while the Hollywoods, 1939 Muny champions, won from the Griesedecks, 2 to 0.

Bill Choc, 19-year-old strikeout king, stole the spotlight as he turned in a three-hit performance against the newly-crowned city champions, and struck out 13 batters. Two hits, a walk and an error by Pitcher Heitert enabled the Hollywoods to score two runs in the fourth.

Watching the scoreboard each day to see if somebody wouldn't knock off those Reds. . . . Somebody did. . . . The day the pennant was clinched at the Polo Grounds. After the Giants had taken an early lead. . . . And then changed pitchers.

Bottomley, Hornsby, Thevenow and Bell, the infield. . . . Funny about Bell. Great third baseman that one season, but he never could repeat. . . . Edgar Clough, member of the pitching staff, who didn't throw a ball in a game until after the pennant was clinched. . . . Alexander, Sherdel, Haines.

Another Flag—and A Headache Series.

CLINCHING the 1928 pennant in Boston and the ride to New York that night. . . . Everybody thought there'd be a wild celebration. . . . But it was just another train ride. . . . How Andy High could hit 'em in the pinch. . . . The Yankees, all crippled up, were going to be a breeze that year. . . . Softest touch a National League club had met in years. . . . And all the Yanks did was take four straight and knock Bill McKechnie all the way to Rochester.

The great Cardinal drive of 1930. There was a team with courage and esprit de corps . . . Pinch hitters would come through . . . Insurmountable leads, seemingly, would be overcome almost daily . . . Chick Hafey was the big hero on the bench . . . Jim Lindsley, the magician of the bull pen . . . The enemy just couldn't hit Jim in the pinch . . . And Lindsey never had another year like that one . . .

The rocking chair pennant drive of 1931 . . . Something new. . . . Nothing to worry about . . . The smoothest Cardinal team . . . Charley Gelbert reaching his peak . . . Forming a great combination with Frankie Frisch . . . Still great team spirit . . . Everybody free with suggestions Any man would stop a game to suggest a strategical move . . . And nobody resented it . . . And then the series and the pleasure of beating the powerful Athletics, the Yankees of the day . . . Burleigh Grimes, worn out in that final game, but trying to stick it out . . . The final play, that high fly that was caught near the right foul line field boxes, and the gesture by Umpire Dolly Stark, that the batter was out, the series over and the Cardinals world champions . . .

And Then Along Came The Boys Called Dean.

THAT wasn't a long time ago, 1934, but Pepper Martin and Bill DeLancey are the only players still on the Cardinal roster who saw action in the series with the Tigers . . . How a team can change its personnel in six years . . . Rothrock, Orsatti, Fullis and Medwick in the outfield . . . Rip Collins, Frisch, Durocher and Pepper Martin, the infield . . . The story of that 1934 pennant race should be "Backing Into a Title," or "Hurrah for the Phils and Dodgers." . . .

And yet the Cardinals went on to defeat the Tigers in as dramatic a series as you'd want to see . . . Dizzy at his best, pitching and wise-cracking . . . Playing a French horn in the band at Detroit, and getting away with it, as he got away with everything else . . . The same Dizz telling Greenberg before the last game, what was going to happen that day . . . And it happened . . . Frisch's double that started the downfall of the enemy in that final contest . . . The parade of Detroit pitchers . . . Another world title . . . The clubhouse celebration . . . Lot of fun, those world series, when you're in them.

Three Are Injured in Race Spill

ALLENTON, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP).—One driver was seriously injured, two others were shaken up and two valuable pacers were killed yesterday in a spill caused by the locking of sulky wheels in the final heat of the 2:12 pace, one of the opening daylight harness features at the Allentown fair.

Ralph Cummins, of York, Pa., suffered a fractured skull and possible internal injuries. Harry Goodhart, veteran Reading (Pa.) trainer and driver, received a severe gash in the back of his head, and Paul Welp, of Williamsport, Pa., suffered minor cuts and bruises.

"Altimeade George," a bay gelding owned by E. P. Cray, of Bellows Falls, Vt., and driven by Upton, was killed outright in the crash, while "Petromite," a brown horse owned by P. M. Coombs, of York, Pa., and driven by Cummins, was so seriously injured it had to be destroyed.

New World Records Set.

DELAWARE, O., Sept. 18 (AP).—Florimal, brown fifly owned by Arden Homestead of Goshen, N. Y., set two world's records for the half-mile track as a four-day grand circuit race meeting opened yesterday.

With Harvey Pownall at the reins, Florimal won both heats of the $2500 two-year-old trot in the cumulative time of 4:17, three-quarters of a second better than the old record held by Calumet and Laramite. The time for the second heat—2:08—was .75 second faster than the previous world's record for two-year-old fillies.

Hi Pat, owned by Willis Rowe of Bloomington, Ill., set a new world's record of 2:05 in the third heat of the $500 handicap pace.

TONIGHT the annual Midwest Fox Hunters' Association will open its three-day meeting at the Cuivre River recreational area near Troy, Mo. More than 300 of the finest hounds from 12 states are expected to compete.

Many persons not directly affiliated with the sport do not understand the Missouri foxhunt idea, now duplicated in nearly every one of the 48 states. In Missouri the State organization consists of member clubs from 74 counties. A total of more than 10,000 individuals who own nearly 50,000 hounds are on the rolls of the State body.

HARRISON.

Strangely enough, it is this group which annually rises to the defense of the fox when others attempt to have an open season declared upon it. Only by accident, when hounds get out of control, is a fox killed or injured. The hunters do stage numerous wolf drives every fall, using the fox hounds as trailers of the husky cattle raiders.

Skeet or Hunting?

DYED in the wool field hunters of a few years ago would have scorned the synthetic shooting idea of skeet. But they are changing their minds somewhat today. That's because this trap-shooting variation supplies conditions closely allied to field shooting.

At the recent State championships a large percentage of the skeet club members were spectators. The actual competitors were for the most part the field hunting group. They get a real thrill out of the competition. And also sharpen up their eyes for the real thing.

Many skeet club members do not take advantage of their memberships until 10 days or so before the bird season opens. That's because skeet sharpens the eye and makes their shooting more accurate.

Walter L. Harrison, Hannibal, winner of the State hi-over-all title, who ended his match competition by breaking a hundred straight clays, got started in the game when a friend took him out and gave him some pre-bob white season practice with a hand trap.

Hunters who spend a couple of hours practicing at the skeet line before taking to the field there score more doubles and fewer cripples.

Not Waiting for the Draft

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

SIXTY new recruits for the navy were sworn in yesterday at the Federal Building by Lieutenant-Commander B. F. Brandt. Five of the young men were St. Louisans and the others were from nearby communities.

ARMY RECRUITING HERE DROPS DUE TO DRAFT

Applications for Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps Increase.

Passage of the conscription law resulted in a drop in voluntary enlistments in the Army here but brought increases in applications for service in the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps, inquiry by the Post-Dispatch showed today.

Col. Ford Richardson, in charge of army recruiting, said 25 men were accepted yesterday, as compared with 34 a week ago. Monday 15 volunteers were accepted, as compared with 18 on the same day last week.

The Marine Corps recruiting office in the Federal Building received 35 applications yesterday, as compared with an average of 15. It was the first noticeable increase in that office. Most of the applicants however, were 18 to 21 years old, under the conscription ages. Of the 35 applicants, about 12 to 15 will be accepted. Those refused are most often turned down because of physical defects.

Navy Recruiting.

The navy recruiting office is receiving 40 to 60 applications a day, as compared with five or 10 before discussion of conscription began in Congress. Many applicants change their minds when informed that their period of enlistment is six years. This morning 60 young men who had been accepted left by train for the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

The Coast Guard recruiting station is averaging 50 to 75 applications a day, only five of which are accepted on the average. The number of applicants is about double the normal figure. Since the first mention of conscription, recruits have started coming in in large numbers.

Col. Richardson said he has been instructed to take charge of all recruiting in Missouri Oct. 1, instead of just the eastern half of the State. His headquarters will remain in St. Louis.

Disturbed by the decrease in the number of accepted army recruits, Col. Richardson said that many applications were being received, but most of the young men who come to his office are "just talking, asking about the draft and mostly trying to find out how they can get out of it." In August, 475 recruits were obtained, although the goal here was 500. This month 500 are being sought again, but in the first two weeks of September only 192 men were accepted.

TVA LISTS SAVINGS OF 9 MILLION A YEAR

Authority Asserts Four Million Profit to Towns Offsets $51,000 Loss.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 18 (AP).—Tennessee Valley residents are saving $9,000,000 annually through use of cheap TVA electricity while local communities are making an annual net profit of more than $4,000,000 in the operation of public utility systems, the Authority announced yesterday.

The figures were cited by Gordon Clapp, general manager, in a statement on the tax replacement situation which grew out of the TVA development and the transfer of electric utilities from private to public ownership.

These benefits, the Authority said, more than offset a $51,000 net loss in total tax payments in the six Valley states.

The TVA estimated that $2,631,000 previously was paid in property taxes on lands acquired by the agency for reservoirs and on privately owned electric properties bought by TVA, municipalities and electric co-operatives, while these agencies currently are paying $3,280,000.

The excess of present payments over all former property tax payments was computed at $649,000.

The chart showed that former business tax payments allocable to these purchases (types of taxes except property tax) aggregated $700,000, leaving a $51,000 deficiency with the subtraction of the $649,000 excess payments on property taxes.

Payments in lieu of taxes by the TVA itself now exceed by $527,000 all former ad valorem taxes collected on power property acquired by TVA, the Authority stated.

The former taxes on this property, which includes 40 per cent of reservoir lands allocable to power, were estimated at $1,018,000, while present payments were listed at $1,545,000.

"Exclusive of business taxes," the Authority said, "the payments now being made to six states and 109 counties in the Valley total 125 per cent of former tax payments." The states are Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina and Georgia.

LATVIAN SKIPPER FORCED TO GIVE UP SHIP AT NEW YORK

Wants to Take It Home After Two Years Absence; Court Orders Him to Keep Off.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—A Latvian sea captain and his 6000-ton freighter parted company today in a little tragedy growing out of Europe's map-changing.

Since 1938 42-year-old Capt. Vilis Bezmer hasn't seen his native Latvia, voyaging from port to port in his tramp freighter, the Regent. Not long ago he and his crew of 26 dropped anchor in New York harbor. That was just after Russia took over Latvia.

Yesterday the skipper appeared in court to answer a disorderly conduct complaint. Anatole Dinbergs, acting Latvian Consul in New York, alleging that the captain refused to leave his vessel. The Consul explained that he, like other Latvian representatives in this country, has refused to recognize the Russian occupation of his homeland. He said he directed Capt. Bezmer to place his ship in drydock, but when the master refused he appointed another skipper, ordering Bezmer to leave.

Bezmer told the Court that owners of the vessel had directed him to report to the Amtorg Trading Corporation, commercial representative of Russia in the United States. There, he said, he was directed to sail the ship to Murmansk, Russia. He declared his crew was anxious to get home.

The Magistrate dismissed the complaint on the captain's promise to stay away from the ship.

LANDON BACKS WILLKIE MUNICH ASSERTIONS

Says Roosevelt and Welles Boasted of President's Effort to Get Settlement.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 18 (AP).—Alf M. Landon, replying to a statement of Secretary of State Hull that Wendell Willkie was "grossly ignorant of the history of the last few years," said last night the Roosevelt administration boasted of its part in the Munich settlement.

The 1936 Republican presidential nominee, who traveled on Willkie's campaign train Monday, issued a statement attacking Hull's charges.

"When Secretary of State Hull speaks about ignorance in foreign affairs, he might address his remarks to persons a little closer to home, who seem to have a habit of messing up his policies as Secretary of State," said Landon.

"Instead of rebuking others, Mr. Hull might rebuke some of the members of his own administration, including his chief, who talked of these momentous questions in an off-hand, casual and confusing way."

The former Kansas Governor said that contentions of Henry A. Wallace, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, "about Republicans being appeasers brings back to mind that Mr. Roosevelt and his official family, immediately following Munich, proudly boasted of the part which Mr. Roosevelt had played in bringing about the Munich settlement for appeasement.

"Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, on Oct. 3, 1938, afraid lest the Roosevelt administration should not get the full measure of credit for the part played by the President at Munich, made an address to the country in which he gave, in great detail, each step taken by the President, and undertook to show that it was really Mr. Roosevelt who inspired the Munich settlement.

"Also, it was common knowledge around Washington at that time that the President had on his desk what he called a 'time table,' in which there was set forth the various dates on which various moves were made, and the President proudly exhibited it to show how he had been in the lead of the movement for the Munich settlement. . . .

"According to Undersecretary of State Welles' speech, the President did address communications to Hitler and Mussolini, personally, during the Munich negotiations, and Mr. Welles was so proud of it all that he read the text of the messages to them."

NATIONAL BEARING METALS APPEALS ON U. S. TAX LEVY

St. Louis Corporation Seeks Redetermination of $16,300 Deficiency Assessment.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The National Bearing Metals Corporation of St. Louis has petitioned the United States Board of Tax Appeals for a redetermination of its alleged deficiency of $16,303 in income and excess profits taxes for 1936 and 1937.

The corporation contended the Collector of Internal Revenue erred in denying a 1936 deduction of $20,752 paid into a fund to guarantee the First National Bank of St. Louis against loss in liquidation of assets of the Franklin-American Bank & Trust Co.

Another error was claimed in the denial of a credit of $97,500 in determining the firm's undistributed net income for 1936 subject to surtax. The corporation also protested against denial by the Collector of deductions totaling nearly $32,000 for losses on building construction machinery discarded and scrapped.

After stipulation between the Collector and Lambert Pharmacal Co. of St. Louis in another case, the board decided there was a deficiency of $9.99 in the 1936 income taxes paid by the concern. Originally the collector held the company was deficient by $3122 in its payment for that year.

JAPANESE SAID TO HAVE AIMED 8 BOMBS AT CANADIAN LINER

One of "Stick" From Plane Reported to Have Hit Vessel, Which Dodged Other Missiles.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 18 (AP).—An authoritative source said today that a Japanese plane aimed eight bombs at the Canadian liner Empress of Asia during an attack on it Saturday, the bombs falling in a "stick" formation and one hitting the liner.

After that, said the informant, the ship zigzagged sharply and other bombs missed it. The plane was out of sight, and in their first panic, the same source said, passengers believed the attacker was a German plane.

(The Japanese Admiralty announced the 16,909-ton liner was hit by a test bomb dropped by Japanese naval pilots engaged in bombing practice off Oshima Island. Japanese officials hastened aboard to apologize and the injured were treated by naval surgeons. The purser of the liner, now en route to Vancouver, B. C., told the Associated Press by radio telephone that the ship suffered no structural damage.)

MEASLES VACCINE REPORTED; SEEN AS BENEFIT TO SOLDIERS

Discovery Described as Universal, Good for Children and Adults.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—Discovery of a vaccine for measles was announced today at the bicentennial conference of the University of Pennsylvania.

This vaccine is universal, good for both children and adults, and in war promises to protect soldiers from the fatal attacks of pneumonia that have followed measles outbreaks in military camps.

The vaccine is the first for this almost universal children's disease, and is the culmination of years of work in numerous laboratories. It was developed by Dr. Joseph Stokes Jr. of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and Dr. Geoffrey Rake of the Squibb Institute, New Brunswick, N. J.

Because of the pneumonia aftermath, measles, it was pointed out, was one of the commonest causes of death of American soldiers in the World War. The disease struck heavily at country youths who because of isolation had escaped childhood attack.

"INDUSTRY AT HELM WILL SPEED DEFENSE"

U. S. Steel Executive Says Business Men Are Competent and Experienced.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP).—Irving Olds, chairman of the U. S. Steel Corporation, said today national defense needs will be produced quicker and at lower cost "if private enterprise is at the helm under its own leadership."

In an address at a luncheon opening a three-day inspection tour of U. S. Steel plants by corporation officials, Olds declared:

"We have read recently of a 'sit-down strike' of capital and of industry's 'refusal' to co-operate with the Government. There is no basis for any of these stories. Unfortunately, we have about us critics who appear only too willing, by reason of ignorance or otherwise, to point a condemning finger at business without attempting to ascertain the underlying facts."

He asserted the strategic steel industry "will not be found lacking in co-operation or in zeal or patriotism" and that "generally speaking, the personnel of American business is both experienced and competent."

He cautioned, however, that it took time to convert orders into finished products, and added:

". . . It will not be surprising if many insufficiencies in military equipment and supplies will exist a year hence."

Although the steel industry is operating about 92 per cent of theoretical capacity, Olds said national defense contracts accounted for "only a small percentage" of production.

"I do not mean," he said, "to convey the impression that when steel in greater quantities is required at some later date for the national defense program the steel industry will be found unequal to the task imposed upon it. On the contrary, I believe the elasticity within the steel industry will permit an ample supply of steel when needed, . . . although some system of priorities may be found necessary."

BEDAUX INCOME TAX PROTEST ON U. S. LEVY OF $252,718

St. Louis Attorney for Industrial System Inventor Says He Was Last Heard Of in France.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Attorneys for Charles E. Bedaux, inventor of the Bedaux method of industrial engineering, protested to the Tax Appeals Board today against the Treasury's claim that Bedaux and his wife, Fern L. Bedaux, owed $252,718 in income taxes and penalties for 1935.

The attorneys, George Link Jr., New York, and Stanley S. Waite, St. Louis, said the Bedauxs' last known address was Chateau de Cande, Monts, Indre et Loire, France.

The petitions contended that the Internal Revenue Commissioner erroneously attributed to the Bedauxs personally, the income of the International Bedaux Co., Inc., from "royalties" for exclusive European rights to the Bedaux system.

BEDAUX INCOME TAX PROTEST ON U. S. LEVY OF $252,718

St. Louis Attorney for Industrial System Inventor Says He Was Last Heard Of in France.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Attorneys for Charles E. Bedaux, inventor of the Bedaux method of industrial engineering, protested to the Tax Appeals Board today against the Treasury's claim that Bedaux and his wife, Fern L. Bedaux, owed $252,718 in income taxes and penalties for 1935.

The attorneys, George Link Jr., New York, and Stanley S. Waite, St. Louis, said the Bedauxs' last known address was Chateau de Cande, Monts, Indre et Loire, France.

The petitions contended that the Internal Revenue Commissioner erroneously attributed to the Bedauxs personally, the income of the International Bedaux Co., Inc., from "royalties" for exclusive European rights to the Bedaux system.

GERMAN OFFICERS SHOW UP IN CITIES ALL OVER RUMANIA

Two Generals in Bucharest —Uniforms Quiet Fear That Russian Troops Will Cross Danube.

By LELAND STOWE
The Chicago Daily News—Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1940.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 18.—Two German Generals in spick and span field gray uniforms installed themselves in our hotel last night. Theirs are the first Nazi army uniforms to brighten our hotel corridors since I first arrived here last May and probably the first to be seen here since the war began. Anyhow, both the Generals and their uniforms are symbolic of Rumania's active entrance into Hitler's "new European order."

They are here as heads of an important military mission and it is said that they will eventually cooperate in the training of a new kind of Rumanian army. It may be assumed in any case and especially in view of Sunday's establishment of an Iron Guard or legionary government, which is ardently pro-Nazi, that German uniforms will become much more commonplace.

Already German officers can be seen occasionally in most of Rumania's larger cities and towns. According to credible reports, several thousand Nazi storm troopers are scattered in various parts of the country. Most of these are posted near the Russian frontier and are concerned with the task of evacuating—in line with the Berlin-Moscow agreement—some 92,000 Germanic residents from Bessarabia and Bucovina, where they would otherwise be absorbed in the expanded Soviet Union.

Since temporary camps have to be established in Rumania for these evacuees, the supervising Nazis will probably find reason to remain here for weeks. Several hundred of them were seen in the city of Galatz on the lower Danube yesterday.

But the Bucharest Government and many other Rumanians are relieved over the presence of a considerable number of Hitler's officers and men at this time. So long as they are visible at frequent intervals along the Russian border, the Rumanians feel that the Red army won't dare to invade Moldavia or to try to cross the Danube near Galatz.

The infiltration of German uniforms also serves to take the edge off the report, denied here and in Berlin, that Moscow has demanded free passage of troops through Dobruja to Bulgaria and also to ease anxiety somewhat over recent Bulgarian mobilization.

The source of the reports about the Russians demanding passage for its troops cannot be pinned down. Wherever it started, it seems to offer further justification for the appearance of Nazi storm troopers in Galatz, the city which lies in the path of any such passage if it were ever attempted.

STARK TO BE AWAY WHEN DEMOCRATS OPEN CAMPAIGN

Governor Will Be at American Legion Convention in Boston the Day State Drive Begins.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 18 (AP).—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark will leave for the American Legion convention in Boston late this week—a fact which will automatically preclude his attendance at the opening of the Democratic state campaign in Moberly Saturday.

Stark said today he had made arrangements to attend the Legion convention "several weeks ago." He is a Missouri delegate and will submit Kansas City's bid for the 1941 convention.

The Governor said he hoped to be back in Missouri by Sept. 26, the day when Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, plans a campaign swing through the State.

ANTI-JEWISH CANDIDATE LOSES IN NEW YORK GERMAN COLONY

Joseph McWilliams Concedes "Shellacking"; Sent to Hospital for Sanity Observation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—A few hours after conceding that he had been given a "shellacking" in yesterday's congressional primaries, Joseph McWilliams, Yorkville anti-Jewish candidate, was committed to Bellevue Hospital today for psychiatric observation.

McWilliams ran in the upper East Side German colony for the Republican nomination for Congress. When the returns were counted last night they showed: McWilliams, 672; James Blaine Walker Jr., the regular party candidate, 2495.

McWilliams went to court today to be sentenced on his second disorderly conduct conviction growing out of the turbulent street meetings in his campaign.

Magistrate Edgar Bromberger ordered him to Bellevue, saying he did so on the basis of a probation report and the impression McWilliams had made upon him in court. If he is found sane, he must appear in court again on Sept. 27.

MINIMUM SOFT COAL PRICES TO BECOME EFFECTIVE OCT. 1

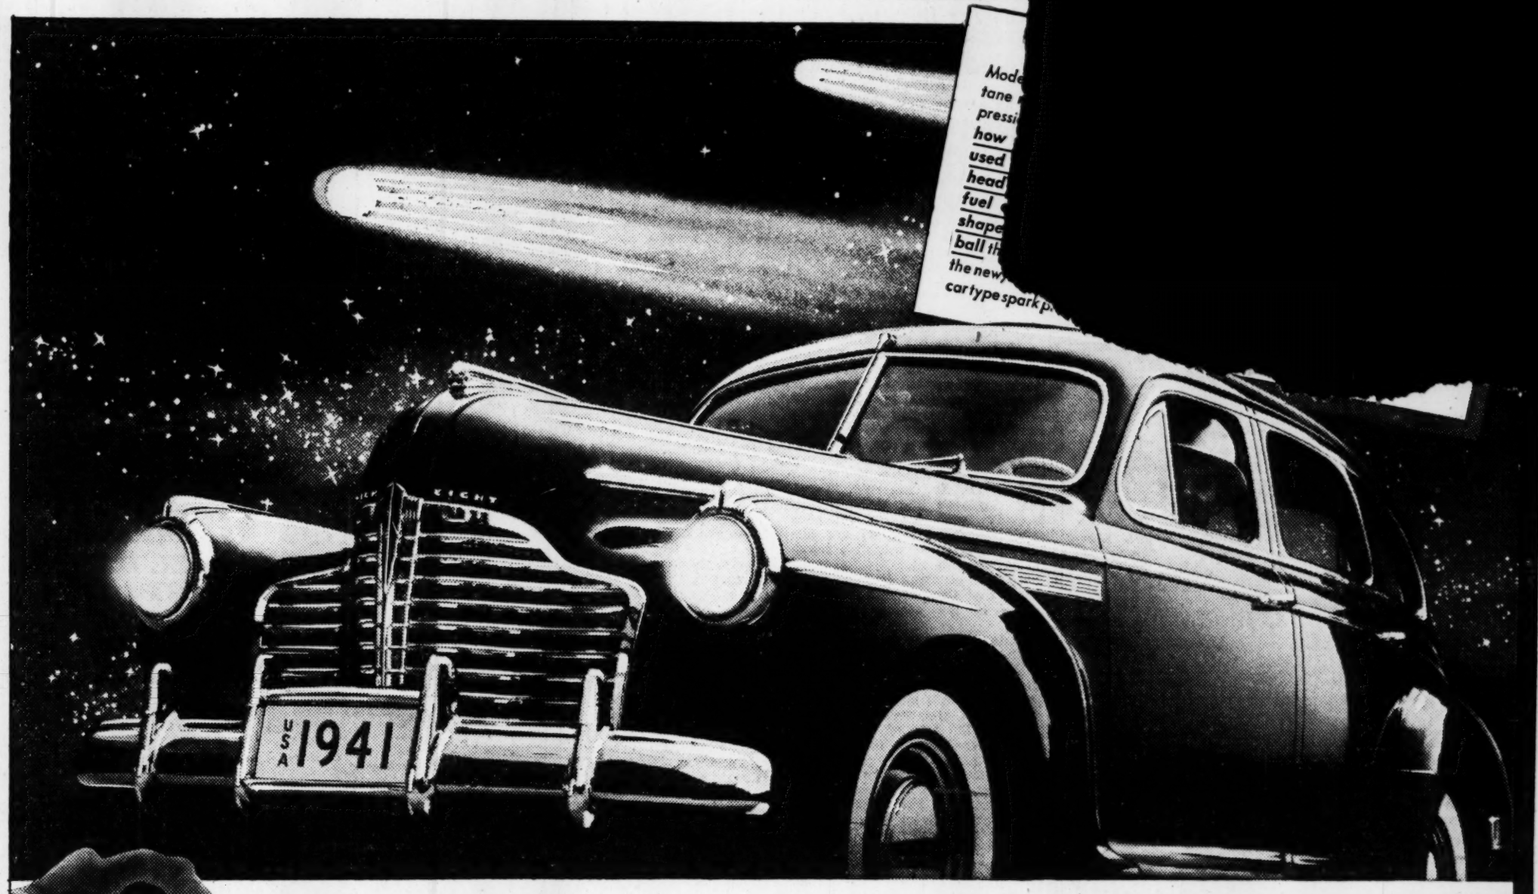
Director Howard A. Gray Says Schedules Will Be Enforced to Strict Letter of Law.

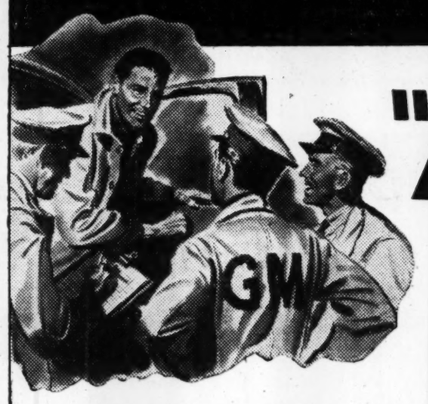
WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The bituminous coal division announced last night that minimum soft coal prices and market regulations positively would take effect Oct. 1 and be enforced to the exact letter of the law.

Howard A. Gray, director, emphasized this in a formal statement which aids said was intended to refute any idea, inspired by numerous long delays, that the industry still could take the division's pronouncements "with a grain of salt."

"The division," Gray said, "has made preparations to begin operation of the compliance program on a nationwide scale immediately when the prices become effective, Oct. 1. Division compliance agents will operate in the producing fields and the consuming areas with the co-operation of representatives of the Bituminous Coal Producers boards."

1st FIRST CHOICE OF MILLIONS. THEIR FIRST THOUGHT FOR SIMPLE HEADACHE. ST. JOSEPH ASPIRIN





"As if you gotta string o'comets by the tail!"

Out at the General Motors Proving Ground they judge an automobile by what's under the hood and not by the bright shining paint.

So straight from that plain-talking hard-testing bunch we bring the picture of this new Buick, as you'll get it once you take it out on the road.

THEY liked the size of this SPECIAL, because those trail-wise drivers know that roadweight means road steadiness.

They liked the room, the softer, steadier ride, the Permi-firm steering—because like you these boys value comfort on the road.

But what they went for was the FIREBALL* Eight.

The new engine under that broad bonnet, still smooth as the down on the pussywillow buds because each is micropoise-balanced after assembly—but now a sockdolagin' son-of-a-seacook for wallop.

"It's as if you gotta string o' comets by the tail," they said—and that's more than just a word-picture.

For in each flame-packed cylinder there is a comet—a twisting, whirling, flaring ball of fire touched off with every spark plug flash. Fuel in this engine is compacted to higher-than-ever compressions, cupped into a flattened ball by new piston-face contours.

Massed around the spark, this fuel is fired from its very heart, burns with sudden, swift completeness that develops 115 horsepower from the same-size engine that last year could give only 107.

It gives you more power when you need it—at low speed or high—and it uses any gasoline of 75 octane rating or better, fuel now available at standard-gasoline prices!

You get this FIREBALL Eight in every '41 Buick, whatever its price.

But you can also get it stepped up still more in power and thrift by the new fuel-supply system we call Compound Carburetion.

Compound Carburetion gets as much as twenty miles an hour more emergency speed from the same fuel rationing—gives road performance and brilliance far beyond dynamometer power ratings—so increases efficiency that at 40 miles an hour, your engine has more than 85% of its power in reserve.

Standard on the Buick SUPER, CENTURY, ROADMASTER and LIMITED, Compound Carburetion is optional at small extra cost on the SPECIAL, increases its horsepower from 115 to 125.

So do you wonder test drivers talk about comets?

And don't you think you ought to find out about the FIREBALL Eight on general principles?

We do—in fact, we wonder how you can wait!

*According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super meteor which travels with a series of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."

The administration candite, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, was proclaimed President-elect by another Congress.

Dr. Almazan, a physician studying at the Johns Hopkins University, made his statement in an interview in the absence of his brother, who is vacationing at Atlantic City. Gen. Almazan, his wife and daughter have been staying here.

"My brother is a democrat, who believes in that form of Government, and who admires the United States," Dr. Almazan said. "President Cardenas and Gen. Manuel Camacho, who was the Cardenas candidate for President, are dictators, who would establish totalitarian government.

"In the elections it was established that Gen. Almazan was the choice of the people for President.

"Only the other day, on Sept. 15, at the beginning of the festivities celebrating the independence of Mexico, which continued for two days, the people showed that they wanted Gen. Almazan for their President. In the face of the Government's armed forces, they shouted for Gen. Almazan.

Dr. Almazan said he did not know whether Gen. Hector F. Lopez, provisional President of Mexico, would proclaim Gen. Almazan President.

"But," he added, "Gen. Almazan will take the oath of office on Dec. 1 as provided by the Constitution of the country."

Hitler's Threat to Invade Dover Much Like Plans Napoleon Laid

French Built Raft Half Mile Long in 1803, Considered Making World's Largest Balloon for "Secret-Weapon" Parachute Troops.

By ROBERT J. CASEY

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Correspondence. Copyright, 1940.

DOVER, Sept. 18.—The smoke puffs of the anti-aircraft guns, the noise of aerial cannon, the parade of silver crosses in the sky, the corkscrew dives of flaming bombers and—most vividly of all—the abiding calm of the local civilians. Until Dover is finally evacuated, or blown flat, that will always be the most remarkable thing about it, the morale of a people who have become so used to the greatest air war in history that they no longer bother to look up at it.

Dover's apathy toward threats of invasion is nothing new. This region where England is separated from France by only a 20-mile channel has always been the objective of continentals. Sometimes the visitors got in as, for example, the Normans. Sometimes they didn't—generally they didn't—as in the case of Napoleon. Always, since the early Britons learned that you could discourage war canoes by hurling rocks at them with a sling shot, there have been defense works of one sort or another on these cliffs. And, for generations, the town has been filled with people taught by experience that advertised troubles seldom arrive.

200-Year-Old Fortress.

From the harbor looking toward other heights where, snuggled in greenery, the anti-aircraft batteries wait unseen, there is plentiful evidence of England's successful stand against invaders. Just beyond where the coast defense guns peep out of modern concrete emplacements are rows of crumbling walls, a fortress-that-was, 200 years ago. On the farther uplands are the ruins of square stone blockhouses such as the Normans may have built, and along the coast for miles stretches a line of round towers, many of them serving as machine-gun nests and observation posts today, which were built to take care of Napoleon. Somewhere in the brush, no doubt, are the remains of casemates dedicated to the defeat of Philip of Spain and Louis XIV.

Of all the world-shakers who, in four centuries, thought it would be a good thing to take over England, Napoleon was the most persistent and the most ingenious. English commentators point out that (like Hitler) he knew nothing about the sea.

Napoleon got the idea of invasion as early as 1798. Naturally, he selected the shortest route—between Calais and Dover—surveyed the departure point in person, looked out at the English cliffs, and announced that the undertaking would be as simple as crossing a moat. War with England didn't come until 1803, but before that Napoleon had made his preparations.

Raft a Half-Mile Long.

His first effort was on a scale worthy of a man of magnificent ideas. He authorized the building of a raft 700 yards long and 350 yards wide—virtually one-half mile by one-fourth mile. This thing—which was actually constructed—never got anywhere, but it must have been wonderful to see. In the middle of it was a terrace surmounted by a circular tower—a fair prototype of a modern gun-turrent. The edges of the raft were protected by thick walls with artillery embrasures. Motive power for this queer craft was to be obtained from huge windmills—six on each side—which were linked up with water wheels.

By 1803, even Napoleon was convinced that his floating island was never going to take his army to England. He called in his engineers and seriously considered the possibility of digging a tunnel under the channel. The engineers told him it was feasible, but could not be done quickly enough.

He then gave thought to an aerial invasion by means of balloons. Sketches showing the possible operation of this plan are still extant. Balloons had already made long flights in France. There seemed to be no reason why, with proper winds, a fleet of them could not land troops across the channel. On the other hand, the cautious engineers advised that the English might retaliate effectively with a kite barrage. . . . Somehow, all this sounds very real and recent.

Had "Secret Weapon," Too.

There was even talk of a "secret weapon" in those days. It ceased to be a secret when Napoleon himself bragged about it. Basically, it was to be the biggest balloon ever constructed—a bag large enough to lift a war galleon with two cannon and a company of soldiers. It was to carry three auxiliary balloons, as large as any ever built up to that time, parachutes, sails and an anchor. Unlike the floating fortress, it was never built.

Hitler announced that he would be in London Aug. 15 and something delayed him. There one finds another parallel to the Napoleonic saga.

Napoleon announced that he would ride into London and dictate peace. He went a step farther. He put out, in advance, a medal commemorating this great event, a medal which bore the inscription "Struck in London." Then he organized his real attack on a plan less fantastic than the others, but no more successful.

Trafalgar Ends the Dream.

He mobilized all the shipwrights in France at Boulogne to construct a flotilla of shallow draught boats. This fleet, he figured, could be propelled by oars on some calm, foggy day, slipping through the British defense fleet which would be dependent on the wind. However, he didn't get this arrangement complete until along about 1805, at which time Nelson destroyed the French fleet at Trafalgar. Meantime, the rowboats had proved difficult to launch, to load, and to maneuver, and it was obvious that they would be completely vulnerable against a well-armed war vessel. Without protection of French naval ships, Admiral Ganteaume told Napolean, a mass movement of shallow draught transports would be suicidal. . . . Napoleon abandoned the idea, and England's channel ports had nothing to worry about for another 100 years.

It is significant, looking back on those days, that the threats of danger by air, and land, and sea were just the same as they are today, and the psychological strain on the populace no different. The home folks published warnings against "Fifth Columnists," and organized pitchfork brigades to defend themselevs against "enemies who may be dropped upon us from balloons."

No wonder all of the present mess seems to Dover like something that has happened many times before.

TWO WOMEN IN AUTO HURT IN CRASH, 19 IN BUS UNINJURED

Mrs. Ebey Dougan, 809 Lemay avenue, and Mrs. Doris Beck, 4419 Grace avenue, suffered skull injuries yesterday when their automobile collided with a bus at Dewey and Bingham avenues. They were taken to St. Anthony's Hospital.

The bus was taking 18 girls to the Notre Dame Convent, Broadway and Ripa avenue. They and the driver, George Tindall of Manchester, Mo., were not injured.

DR. KANE ON DEFENSE COSTS

The huge expenditures the United States is making to protect itself from the dangers which have beset Europe is part of the constant vigilance that is the price of freedom, Dr. E. Emmett Kane told the student body of Visitation Academy yesterday in a Constitution day address.

"Repercussions of the war are being felt over here and we are going to be forced to pay part of the bill," he said.

SAYS GOVERNMENT HAMPERS BUSINESS, DIVIDES PEOPLE

Child labor, once regarded as the principal source of new wealth, has been banished from industry by machinery, Robert L. Lund, executive vice-president of the Lambert Pharmacal Co., said in a luncheon talk before the Associated Drug and Chemical Industries at the University Club today.

Speaking on "Invention—America's Defense Weapon," he asserted that, contrary to public belief, inventions have created far more jobs than they have destroyed. During the period of America's greatest technological advance, he continued, population increased 40 per cent and employment 68 per cent.

"For the past 10 years," he said, "we have been laboring under the handicap of a great depression, of social legislation which, however praiseworthy its objectives, hampered enterprise, made property insecure, and divided the people among themselves. I charge that the blame must be laid upon unwise governmental policy."

Can any students still at schoo qualify for deferment?

Students who have for more than one year been preparing for the ministry in theological or divinity schools are exempt from all train ng and service, but they must register.

College students who during the academic year 1940-41 are enrolled in courses leading to a degree in arts or science, and graduate students pursuing studies for which a degree in arts or science is a prerequisite, will be deferred for that academic year—but in no case beyond July 1, 1941.

A provision in the law enabling the deferment of those men whose "activity in other endeavors" is essential in the national interest may be held to include students in aeronautical engineering, mechanics and other courses of instruction not associated with an arts or science degree but of primary importance now to the national defense program.

Who will be placed in Class III for dependency?

The problem of local boards in determining who is to be deferred because of dependency is fundamentally simple. Though there are no absolutely rigid tests, we have well-defined guides and rules. You will be placed in Class III, the dependency deferment class, if it is found that you have one or more of the following relatives dependent upon you for reasonably adequate support:

1. A wife or child.

2. A mother or foster-mother, aged or invalid father, foster-father or grandparents.

3. A brother under 16 years of age, a sister under 18 years of age, or an invalid brother or sister regardless of their age.

The term "dependent child" includes unborn child, stepchild, a child legally adopted. Boys over 16 years and girls over 18 years, unless they are invalids, will not be considered dependent children.

Furthermore, you will not be given a deferment unless the relative you cite lives in the United States or one of the territories and possessions.

Who will be considered dependents?

Anyone of the relatives just listed will be considered your dependent if his income plus your income from all sources except work is not enough to provide reasonably adequate support. Inquiry will be made as to all of his and your fairly certain sources of income, excluding, of course, public charity and the income which you provide from your own labor. If there are other persons under a legal obligation to contribute to his support, that fact will also be taken into consideration in deciding whether or not he may be counted as your dependent.

If your dependents have in large part been supported by money which you or your dependents have been receiving from a close relative, rather than from your income, it will be difficult for you to support a claim for deferment. But if a wealthy relative merely could supply, but thus far has not supplied, the support for your dependent, you may be deferred unless that relative is under a legal obligation to support the dependent.

Will married men be deferred?

The law makes no such specific exemption. It does given the President power to defer the service of men with dependents and also those who are physically, mentally or morally deficient. As a matter of fact, the final law is so worded as apparently to bar deferring on grounds of dependency a married man whose wife is self-supporting. The army, however, would prefer to waive the question of support where the wife lives with her husband.

In all probability marriage entered into before the registration takes place will result in deferment for the husband during peacetime, if the military view is followed, unless his wife may be earning enough to support herself.

Is a husband paying alimony to a divorced wife entitled to deferment?

No specific provision has been made in the proposed regulations for the support of a divorced wife. In those States, however, where the husband is under a legal obligation to support his divorced wife she will unquestionably be considered a dependent for the purpose of deferment. If, however, the wife has re-married or is receiving income from other sources or is herself working, then she is no longer dependent upon her divorced husband, despite the fact that h ventions have created far more jobs than they have destroyed. During the period of America's greatest technological advance, he continued, population increased 60 per cent and employment 68 per cent.

"For the past 10 years," he said, "we have been laboring under the handicap of a great depression, of social legislation which, however praiseworthy its objectives, hampered enterprise, made property insecure, and divided the people among themselves. I charge that the blame must be laid upon unwise governmental policy."

In all probability marriage entered into before the registration takes place will result in deferment for the husband during peacetime, if the military view is followed, unless his wife may be earning enough to support herself.

Is a husband paying alimony to a divorced wife entitled to deferment?

No specific provision has been made in the proposed regulations for the support of a divorced wife. In those States, however, where the husband is under a legal obligation to support his divorced wife, she will unquestionably be considered a dependent for the purpose of deferment. If, however, the wife has re-married or is receiving income from other sources or is herself working, then she is no longer dependent upon her divorced husband, despite the fact that he continues to pay alimony or to make payments under a divorce settlement.

Must I live on my salary to qualify for deferment because of my dependents?

Unless you and your dependents, other than your wife, are living almost entirely on your salary, you will probably not be able to secure a deferment. For instance, if you earn $50 a week but also receive $100 a month from a trust fund, and the $100 a month would be enough to support your dependent, the loss of your salary would not justify your deferment. But if your dependent's sole source of support is your present salary—which would end on your induction into the army—then obviously all that remains would be your military pay, and if that amount is insufficient to support your dependent, a deferment would be granted.

The sources of income which will be studied by the authorities include the following:

1. Your pay as a member of the army or navy, which you would be expected to send home as a contribution to your family.

2. The amount of support your relatives would get, during your absence, from any provision of law, such as State old-age pensions. (In many States old-age pensions are given to persons over 65 if they have no other means of support. Your aged parent or grandparent, eligible for the old-age pension, could not count as a dependent.)

3. The amount of money you receive from any devise, legacy or bequest, as a result of a will or a deed, or some other legal transaction.

The Government does not intend to force your dependents to reduce their standards of living materially. If you can show that a serious reduction will take place if your salary is denied to them, you will be entitled to deferment. You must prove that they have actually been dependent on you and that they cannot maintain themselves without your support.

Can I plead dependency if either my dependent or I has property?

If either you or your dependent other than your wife has income-producing property that can support you or your dependent, your claim to deferment will be denied. On the other hand, if the property produces no income or produces insufficient income, the proposed regulations do not require that it be sold to support your dependents while you are in the army or navy. The basic consideration is not property but income. Accumulated savings would not be considered income, but the interest on these savings would be. This would be treu even in time of war.

How will the local boards decide who has dependents?

The regulations charge the local draft boards with the duty to render humane decisions. Whether or not reasonably adequate support exists in a particular case cannot be determined by rule of thumb. Intelligence, accompanied by full sympathy, must be shown. What would be adequate in one locality or in one set of circumstances might not be adequate in another.

The boards are expressly instructed by the regulations to approach each case with sympathy and common sense. While safeguarding the interests of the nation, they are required to give protection to meritorious claimants, with the thought always in mind that the classification plan is designed to enroll an armed force with a minimum of hardship for those who remain at home. If you seek deferment, the board will be required to study the facts in your questionnaire, in the affidavits yo submit, as well as evidence obtainable from any source.

If the board finds that your induction into the service will deprive your wife, child, brother, parent, or grandparent of reasonably adequate support, you will not be taken away from them. Bear in mind that you are granted only a deferment, not an exemption. At any time a shortage of manpower may compel the Government to call you anyhow, and a change in your home life is certain to end the deferment.

What is a conscientious objector and what happens to him?

A conscientious objector is now defined as one who, "by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form." It should be noted that in the last war only persons who were members of a well recognized religious sect whose principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form were considered conscientious objectors. The new definition extends the term to cover persons who may not be formally affiliated with any church or sect, but who nevertheless can establish that

Use of 90-Mile Guns Presages Try At Invasion, Says Fletcher Pratt

Nazi Attempt Probably Only Matter of Days, Perhaps Hours — Effect of Big Weapon Chiefly Moral.

By FLETCHER PRATT
Author, Historian and Contributor to Military Publications.

THE German announcement that London is being shelled with big cannon from 90 miles away means that a mass attempt to invade England is probably a matter of days, perhaps of hours, in spite of the weather.

The military effect of such weapons is small, and certainly does not pay the cost of building them. This was demonstrated by the 75-mile gun that shelled Paris in the World War. Actually, there were at various times 12 of those guns as many as six of them in action at once. All were wretchedly inaccurate.

The best figures show that one-third of the shells they fired missed the whole city of Paris, and only one of all those shells did any damage that might be considered military by the widest definition. That one struck a subway entrance and caved it in.

A gun firing this distance cannot be aimed in any proper sense. The shell has to travel through many layers of air, clear up into the stratosphere, then descend through other layers of air. All these layers have wind current of varying direction and intensity and during its long upward and downward flight, these carry the shell far from the point at which it was directed.

Airplane observation is no help. No two shots will fall anywhere near the same point, even supposing the gun to be given exactly the same laying and elevation.

In addition, guns of such extreme range require huge powder charges, and the barrel of the piece must be tremendously long—90 to 120 feet. The tremendous explosion generated by the powder charge rapidly scores and tips even the hard steel of the gun-liner.

German artillery officers had to discover how far their Paris guns shells went by means of a pressure gauge inserted in the side of the barrel, which told what the velocity of that particular shell had been when it left on its flight.

From this they formed an estimate of the necessary increase in the charge for the next shot. At the end of 50 shots the Paris guns were no longer serviceable. There has been no improvements in artillery to justify the belief that the London gun will be any more durable.

The big guns are simply a piece of frightfulness, put into action partly for moral effect, partly to distract British airmen and artillery that might be out on other tasks.

The fact that the London guns are in action probably means that an invasion attempt is scheduled for the earliest possible moment; and it would be no surprise to see it accompanied by a drive through Spain against Gibraltar.

Nazi Super-Gun Braced With Cables Like Suspension Bridge.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—The prototype of the long-range guns with which Germans say they are shelling London is an awkward-looking weapon with an extremely long, slender barrel, often pictured in films and magazines here.

The barrel is so slim that it must be supported with cables like a suspension bridge. Four such cables run from the breech to the muzzle and are braced outward about the middle of the barrel with center supports. With these guys and struts, the gun looks much like one of those radio towers which is tapered at both ends, except that the gun is not set vertically.

When fired, the muzzle of the long German guns wave in the breeze, as observers have noted when motion pictures were shown here.

Technically this is known as "muzzle whip" or "muzzle lash."

The supporting cables help to reduce this and prevent the muzzle from dropping when shot makes it hot.

The German long rifles are said to be charged with a powder formula more powerful than those in common use in other countries.

ONE BRITON HAS HARD WEEK, HIS OFFICE AND HOME BOMBED

He Is Buried in Debris by First Explosion But Escapes Uninjured.

(Copyright, 1940.)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The last week has been a hard one for W. E. Morris of Southwest London. First, a bomb landed outside his office and exploded, burying him in debris. He was shaken but uninjured.

When he arrived at his office the following morning he found that a fire bomb had come in through the door and burned what was left of his furniture and woodwork.

In a shelter with his wife in the garden two nights later, he heard a shattering explosion and crawled out to find his house in ruins.

GERMANS REPORTED MOVING TO PARIS TO ESCAPE BOMBING

Reuters Quotes Travelers as Saying Unoccupied France Is Starving.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The number of Frenchmen in unoccupied France who favor continuing the fight against Germany under Gen. Charles de Gaulle is increasing, Reuters, British news agency, declared today, quoting an Englishman who crossed from France into Spain.

"The De Gaullists, among whom are many soldiers, hold regular secret meetings in Marseille and other cities," the traveler was quoted as saying.

Reuters said he also reported that food conditions in unoccupied France were nearing the starvation point.

"Potatoes are unobtainable," he was quoted, "as the Germans have removed the whole crop."

German transportation of food and other supplies is being sabotaged, he said, but many Germans are moving to Paris to escape British aerial bombardment of Western Germany.

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 18 (AP). Two young Frenchmen, believed to be aviators anxious to fight for Britain, were seized by police yesterday as they sought to stow away on the British steamer Highwear, bound for England.

Maj. Al Williams On Aviation

Says Navy Should Inform Taxpayers If New Ships Can Withstand Air Attacks.

By MAJOR AL WILLIAMS

THE news from Washington these days concerning our rearmament program, particularly the naval end of it, is far from satisfying to the average American who insists upon retaining a very practical idea of the whole affair.

It is by no means forgotten that this Navy, on which billions have been expended since World War I, reported to the American people (voluntarily at that) that its warships were not able to withstand air attack. No matter what the Admirals think, the people see great cracks in the whole setup. When the recent Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison, told the people that the Navy's machinery, i. e., warships and such like, were not fit for any kind of aerial combat that might be waged for control of the sea, the people were shocked. Edison hinted at that time that the only way to refit the Navy was to rebuild it from the bottom up. We didn't really believe he meant just that. But apparently he did.

Now arise the questions—what will the new Navy be—what kind of warships have been devised to withstand air attack? Will these new air attack-proof warships have belled or streamlined decks—no longer decks in the old sense of the word, but rather armor plating curved upward to shunt air bombs into the water? We know that all the old superstructure, slangily referred to in engineering as "gingerbread," will be eliminated. That stuff, such as Admiral's bridges and other relics of bygone days, must be removed. That's the stuff that bombs toss around.

Change in Turrets.

The current warships with their turrets and small-gun emplacements must be radically re-designed. From the time of the great naval sleeping sickness toward the menace of air attack to the laying down of the new ships certainly has not been long enough to do much experimenting. What will the new air-proof warships be like? And if anyone really thinks he knows what they will be like, upon what experimental and test work has such an opinion been founded? What assurance have we that the new design will be fit and adequate against air bombardment? These are the questions in the minds of practical Americans. We know that detailed answers cannot be given. But billions after billions call for some kind of general answer, and

SURVIVAL OF OLD ECONOMIC ORDER IN EUROPE DOUBTED EVEN IF ENGLAND WINS WAR

System Slowly Bleeding to Death—Its End Likely to Have More Far-Reaching Effects Than Death, Destruction of Bombers — Vitality Sapped Before Fighting Began.

By WALLACE R. DEUEL

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1940.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.

THE old Europe is dying, as it lived, beyond its means.

Economically and financially, as in other respects, the continent is like a man who inherited a great fortune, but who has squandered it all, now is bankrupt, and has cut his wrists in a luxurious home on which the mortgage has been foreclosed.

The hemorrhage of capital from which the relatively free pre-war capitalistic economy of Europe is slowly bleeding to death is less noisy and spectacular in other respects than the bloodshed of the battlefields and the destruction of the bombers, but the end of that economy, which is likely if the war lasts much longer, will probably have more far-reaching effects than the death and devastation, which is so much more vivid in newsreels and so much easier to understand.

The danger of death from loss of blood would still be there, furthermore, even if England should win the war, and even if it should win, by some miracle, this fall. Because, while England might want to restore a relatively free capitalistic system—which is more than the Nazis will do if they win the war—it is doubtful whether England will be able to do so.

Arming Sapped Vitality.

The war will have been a short one, it is true, if it ends this fall. But the preparations for it went on so long and at such cost that they alone were dangerously sapping the vitality of continental capitalism even before actual fighting began. And an increased drain of economic lifeblood has been going on since the outbreak of hostilities at such a rate that it is doubtful if Europe can endure much longer and still survive in anything like its previous economic and financial form.

For the war is costing Germany about 4,500,000,000 marks a month (ordinary civil expenditures probably amount to another 500,000,000 marks a month) and must be costing other belligerents—and some neutrals, like the United States, as well—at least that much, proportional to populations. And no economic system can stand losses like these indefinitely and live.

Of the total, 5,000,000,000 marks that the Nazis are spending per month, they are raising approximately 2,700,000,000 by borrowings, approximately 2,000,000,000 by taxation and approximately 300,000,000 in the form of earnings on Government-owned property and from other sources.

Equal to U. S. Rate.

The Nazis have been borrowing money and pouring it into the German national economy ever since they seized power at a rate equaled in no other country except the United States. Most of this money the Nazis have raised and are still raising by borrowings.

The public debt when the Nazis seized power was 11,602,000,000 marks. By the outbreak of the present war the disclosed public debt had risen to 37,363,000,000 marks and there was probably an additional undisclosed debt of approximately 10,000,000,000 marks, making a total of between 45,000,000,000 and 50,000,000,000 marks, an increase of between 35,000,000,000 and 40,000,000,000 in a little over six and one-half years.

During the first 10 months of the war the Nazis borrowed 22,810,000,000 marks more, according to an article published recently in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung and by now war borrowings probably have mounted to 30,000,000,000 marks.

This makes a grand total of between 65,000,000,000 and 70,000,000,000 which the Nazis have borrowed and spent since they seized power.

Nazi war borrowings roughly are equally divided between short-term and long-term loans. The Government has issued three kinds of

Mr. Willkie and the Negro.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NEWS stories related that one of Wendell Willkie's most vigorous talks in Chicago, last Saturday, was made to Negroes on Chicago's South Side. What I desire to know is, Are Negroes allowed to live in Elwood or Rushville, Ind?

Are there signs in these towns forbidding Negroes to get off the train?

Were they removed for Willkie to make his acceptance speech, in order that Negro delegates might be present?

Is Wendell Willkie a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People? Harold Ickes is.

Has Mr. Willkie, as president of Commonwealth & Southern, ever raised his voice in any of the Southern states in defense of the Negro?

It seems to me that it is playing to the galleries to say nice things to colored people in Chicago, where they have more freedom than in any other city in America.

Will Willkie champion the cause of the Scottsboro boys in Birmingham, Charleston or Atlanta?

What the colored citizen of America desires is not special mention or special privileges, but the promise of a statesman that he will ask Congress to give him power to enforce the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

RUTH ROWLAND.

America's Crisis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR able exposition of hard facts in your editorial Sunday, "In This Grave Hour," and your good judgment in reprinting the Senate Naval Committee report, made May 15, 1940, were most timely.

America has come to the point of a reckless gambler who has the means to carry on without fear of the future, but bad influences are brought to bear and he stakes his competence and happiness on the turn of destiny's dice.

Should he heed the advice of selfish interests, he may well lose all he strove to have and to hold, and with it will go also peace of mind.

LOUIS E. ALEWEL.

"Too Unsafe for Another Four Years."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Constitution of the United States declares itself as the supreme law of the land. The President takes a special oath to defend, preserve and protect it.

It specifies that the President shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur.

The agreement by which the destroyers were exchanged for naval bases is a treaty, and a most important one. Treaties are agreements between nations.

Thomas Jefferson obtained the consent of the Senate to the Louisiana Purchase when the latter ratified the agreement or treaty.

In the destroyer deal, the President united within himself the executive power of the Government and the legislative power of the Senate. Students and teachers of constitutional law have said this leads to the loss of liberty.

A democracy such as ours must have three departments of government, coequal, none encroaching on the powers of the others, and independent of one another.

If the President disregards the Constitution in such an important matter as treaties, so as to endanger our fundamental law and free institutions of government before the election, what dire things will be in store for us after the election?

He is too unsafe to trust for another four years.

HENRY A. KERSTING.

Criticises White Committee.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WISH to congratulate, through the medium of your newspaper, Senator Clark of Missouri for his speech criticising the William Allen White Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies.

This group is the most dangerous in the United States today. It is not only trying to get us into war, but to strip us of what few weapons we do have.

AMERICA FIRST.

Wants City Rid of Fly Ash.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NOW that we won't have any more smoke in our city, and since the people are going to pay such a fancy price for coal, would it be asking too much of this administration to rid us of what is called fly ash?

There was much talk about the smoke being injurious to our health. How about these fine cinders which get in through closed doors and windows? Are they not injurious to health?

When fly ash gets into the house and one tries to wipe it off, it scratches and mars the polish on the furniture and on the floors.

If it does that, it surely does no good to our lungs. TAXPAYER.

A SACRIFICE FOR FREEDOM.

When a great and free nation takes a momentous step, a step that at first glance might even seem to be at variance with its most hallowed traditions, then it is not only fitting, but also vitally necessary, that valid reasons for such action be set before its people and the world.

The United States took such a step when the President put his signature to our first peacetime conscription law. The adequate warrant for his action and that of the Congress was eloquently set forth in the document in which he proclaimed the law to be in effect.

"America stands at the crossroads of its destiny," said Mr. Roosevelt. "A few weeks have seen great nations fall. We can no longer remain indifferent to the philosophy of force now rampant in the world. The terrible fate of nations whose weakness invited attack is too well known to us all.

"We must and will marshal our great potential strength to fend off war from our shores. We must and will prevent our land from becoming a victim of aggression.

"Our decision has been made."

It is in that decision that the continuance of our freedom may well lie. The free spirits of Vienna and of Prague, of Oslo and of Paris, were not unaware of the totalitarian threat. They saw the menace grow beyond their borders and in their own councils, too. They adumbrated the virtues of the free life, but, because they could not or would not, they did not make the decision that might have provided its adequate defense. And so, one by one, they fell.

Freedom has its price. Just now, it is a limited and temporary curtailment of freedom itself. The people of the United States are now paying that price, and paying it gladly. As they do so, they certainly will echo the words with which the President closed his proclamation:

"May we all renew within our hearts that conception of liberty and that way of life which we have all inherited. May we all strengthen our resolve to hold high the torch of freedom in this darkening world so that our children and their children may not be robbed of their rightful inheritance."

May sacrifice enhance for all of us the value and the appreciation of the free way—a way that today is ours almost alone.

COMMANDER KELLY'S SOUND WARNING.

National Commander Raymond J. Kelly of the American Legion has said a wise thing. In Boston for the annual convention of veterans of the first World War, he warns citizens of the United States against war hysteria and the assumption that our involvement in the conflict between Great Britain and Germany is inevitable.

The program he proposes is, in essence, to strengthen our national defenses to the utmost, expeditiously and efficiently, remembering that these armed forces are to defend America, not to plunge the country into foreign wars.

The soundness of Commander Kelly's advice is manifest. There is no surer way to become embroiled than to assume that involvement cannot be avoided. Should the American people resign themselves to a fate which they cannot affect, they will inevitably be at war. And they will also forfeit a major function of the people in a democracy—control of their own destiny.

STIGMATUM.

A pundit has taken us to task in the letter column for employing the word "stigmatum" in commenting a few days ago on an unhappy incident. He reported, with smug satisfaction, a long and labored round of research. From dictionary to dictionary he slogged, with ever the same barren result. When at last he came to the ne plus ultra of wordy authority, that Oxford monster, and found no trace of "stigmatum" there, his joy was boundless. Then his letter, a pedantic uppercut designed to knock us cold.

Extenuation tenders its good offices. We might, paraphrasing Pope, say that "in words, as fashions," there must always be a first time. Like mousetraps, words have to be invented. And the best, the swiftest, of dictionaries are necessarily a lap or two behind the latest usage. But the simple truth is preferable.

Be it here recorded, then, that before he was a poet, Theocritus was a goatherd, and perhaps in his juvenile loneliness on those Syracusan hills, as he defended his flock from thieving forays, some harsh experience engendered an emotion which later would be tagged as a stigmatum. Did not Verulam confess that the judgment pronounced upon him as "the wisest, wittiest and meanest of mankind" was a just stigmatum? Time has never unveiled Prosper Merimee's "Unknown," whose indifference to a lifelong devotion minted "stigmatum" in that final reproach.

And once upon a time there was a Post-Dispatch dictionary which the years have endeared and glorified. It caught a felon's fancy. On a morning it was gone. Thumbed and tattered by constant usage, it was a decrepit veteran. A gaudy successor occupies, but never has filled, its place. Did that old staff dictionary carry the word "stigmatum"? Of course it did.

Larry McPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, second-place team in the National League, has challenged the Yankees to a post-season series—as if they had not woe enough.

HEROES OF ENGLAND.

England is producing heroes on almost a mass-production scale in these critical days. That fiendish contrivance of total war, the delayed-action bomb, is primarily responsible. Robert J. Casey, in a dispatch from somewhere in the inferno known as Hell's Corner, yesterday told the story of one such hero, Jock Evans. Jock was a former British laborer, of no great talents or resourcefulness, but of untold courage. When a time-bomb landed in the area he was patrolling as air raid warden, he roped off the spot, warned dozens of persons away, rejected pleas to flee for safety and stood doggedly by until it exploded and blew him to bits.

Then there was the "suicide squad" that dug four days and nights, to get an 1100-pounder away from the precincts of St. Paul's Cathedral, where it lay buried. Twice the monster slipped back into the excavation. After the excruciating task had been completed and the Lieutenant in charge had driven the bomb away on a truck, it was exploded in a marsh and left a crater 100 feet across.

There are other gripping stories from London as well. Stories of doctors and nurses who worked, while bombs still fell, to get 160 patients safely out of a hospital where a delayed-action missile had imbedded itself. Stories of firemen who disregard air raid alarms and go on, without sleep or food, fighting great conflagrations set by the bombers. Stories of plain citizens roused to heights of epic gallantry under the Nazis' wanton onslaughts against their homes. England remains a "land fit for heroes."

PLIGHT OF UNIVERSITY CITY'S SCHOOLS.

A lowering of educational standards has become necessary in St. Louis' most populous suburb, University City, as the result of a court decision last July knocking out 44 cents of the levy of $1.82 on the $100 approved by the voters. The school term has been cut from 10 to nine months. Twenty of the 200 teachers have resigned and will not be replaced. The board has stopped virtually all free supplying of textbooks and supplies. Some courses have been eliminated. Classes are larger, some so crowded that not all children have desks.

Citizens of University City are sufficiently aroused to launch a movement for attempting to solve the vexing problem. At a meeting Monday night, plans were laid for seeking both immediate and long-range remedies. The most pressing need is for funds to permit needy children to buy supplies, and it is encouraging to see a move being made to this end. An effort also will be made to seek additional funds for the district, to make up in some measure for the loss of about 25 per cent of its expected revenue.

The ultimate remedy, however, is an amendment to the State Constitution, an involved process which will require at least two years. The needlessly rigid constitutional provisions on school taxes are at bottom responsible for the plight in which the University City schools now find themselves. It was in order to get around these provisions that the board, like others elsewhere in the State, was forced to the device of transferring money from the building fund to salaries and incidentals. This method was successfully attacked in court by the four taxpayers who obtained the injunction.

Taxes will be lower in University City as a result of these citizens' move, but at the expense of educational standards. There will be another cost as well: vacant residential units and the depreciation of property values. While the schools are thus crippled, few families will feel like moving into University City, and there may even be an exodus to suburbs without this handicap on education. The movement to solve the University City school problem deserves support both for the sake of the students' welfare and for the sake of the community's continued progress.

"SENATORIAL COURTESY."

Senator Truman announces that he has asked the President to reappoint Maurice Milligan for his own unexpired term as District Attorney for the Western District of Missouri. Milligan, it will be remembered, was compelled by the Hatch Act to resign that post to enter the campaign against Truman for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

"But for this legislation, he could have made the race and kept his job," said Truman. "He has made a good District Attorney, and I see no reason why he should be penalized by the law. I hope that the President will make the appointment."

This is a handsome gesture on the part of the Senator, and we have no inclination to look into his motives. However, it would come with much more grace had not Mr. Truman opposed the renomination of Mr. Milligan in the midst of his successful prosecution of the Pendergast machine—the machine to which the Senator is beholden.

Senatorial courtesy now would be courtesy indeed, had Mr. Truman not invoked "senatorial courtesy" then.

JUST THE REVERSE IS TRUE.

Senators Austin of Vermont and Burke of Nebraska have turned in a minority report which attacks the recommendations for reciprocal taxing of Federal, state and local government securities as "fiscally, economically and socially unsound and unconstitutional."

It would be difficult to describe the proposal to end tax exemption for income from Government bonds and securities in terms more inaccurate.

Do these Senators not know that Presidents Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt all are on record against "the convenient cyclone cellar for the rich man," to use the Wall Street Journal's accurate description?

Do these Senators not know that Secretaries of the Treasury Mellon and Mills took the same stand? That Secretary Hull, when a member of Congress, said that it is "unwise in this country to create a class which cannot be reached for tax purposes"?

Do they not know of the series of Supreme Court decisions which have been reversing the old line of precedents on which income tax immunity was illogically founded?

Just the contrary of what Senators Austin and Burke say is true. The abolition of tax exemption for income from Government securities is fiscally, economically and socially sound. And judging from their deliberate acts, Justices of the Supreme Court are eagerly waiting for a chance to declare it constitutional.

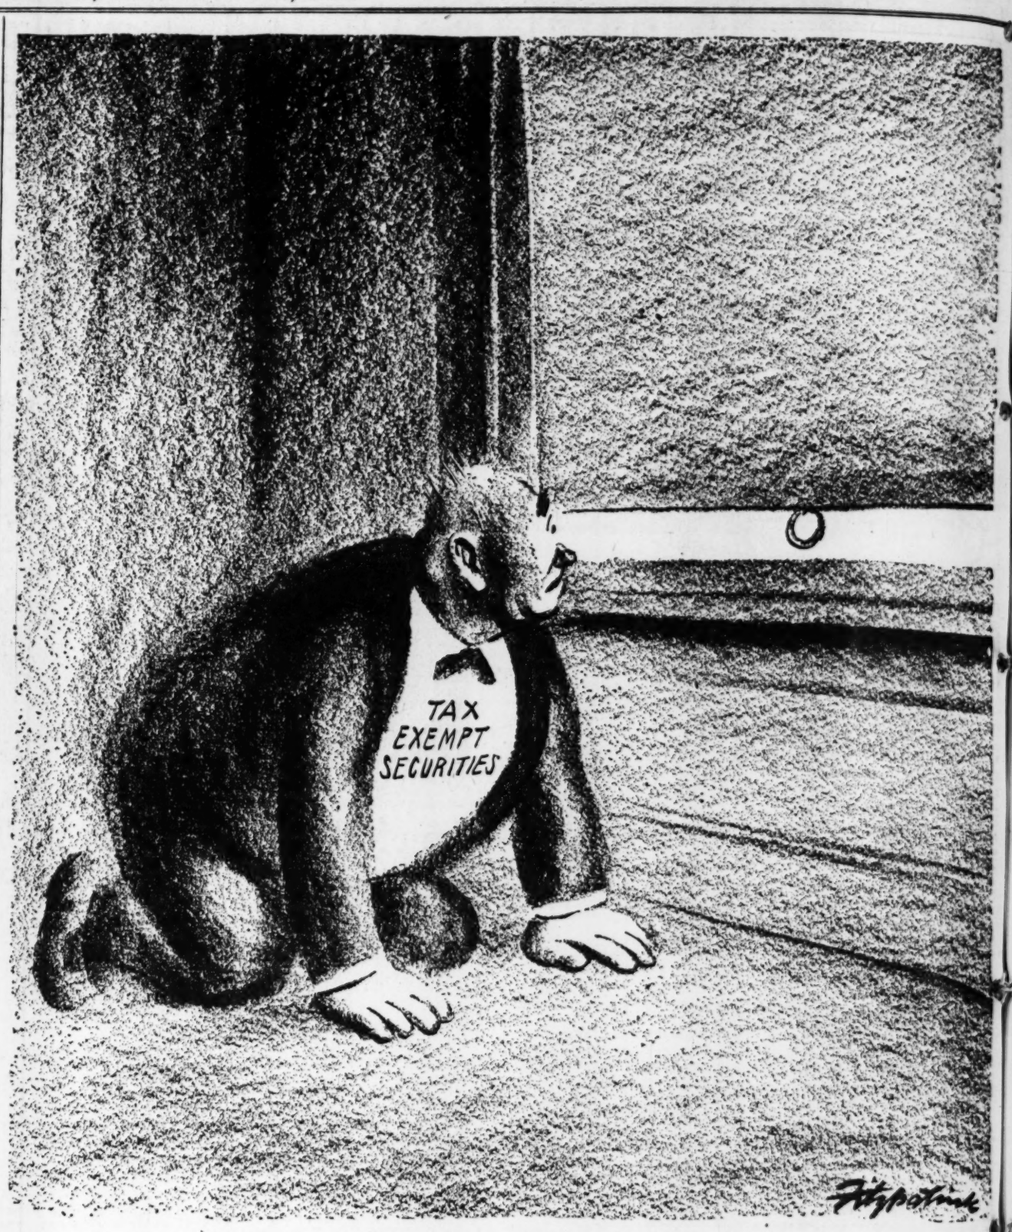
REPORTER'S RULE NO. 1.

It is the reporter's first rule to check and double-check his facts before sending a story across the city desk. So it is a little surprising to find Carter Field, who for years has represented a string of newspapers in Washington, leaping off the deep end in a contribution made on behalf of the Republican National Committee to the Presidential Battle Page of the Chicago Times—a page given over each day to material prepared by the two major parties and published without a touch of the editor's blue pencil.

On Monday, Mr. Field was moved to write a fanciful skit about Chicago's Ed Kelly and his relations with the President. Off on the wings of fancy, he launched into the charge that Mr. Roosevelt had allowed Mayor Kelly to compromise a sizable income tax claim, instead of sending him to jail.

No happy landings here! It so happens that Herbert Hoover, not Franklin Roosevelt, was in the White House when Ed Kelly was permitted to settle his income tax case. Nor had Kelly yet been elected Mayor of Chicago. The settlement, made in connection with a civil suit, was negotiated with George E. Q. Johnson, a Republican, who was then United States District Attorney for Northern Illinois.

We do not mean to hold the Hoover administration culpable because of this transaction. We merely wish to remind Mr. Field of Reporter's Rule No. 1.



IS MY NUMBER UP?

A Move to "Sneak America Into War"

The Mirror of Public Opinion

New campaign to send army planes and navy torpedo boats to England, following success of drive for destroyer deal, is viewed as covert attempt to get U. S. into conflict; Milwaukee paper doubts legality of the plan; criticises committee for hiding its objectives.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

THE Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies has started a campaign to dispatch 25 American bombing planes, 20 American torpedo boats and as many American combat planes as "can be spared" to aid Great Britain in her war with Germany.

Thus the campaign to sneak America into the war runs true to form. It began with asking a little, and when that was given, more was asked. We traded the destroyers—the Aid the Allies Committee was hammering for that—and now it is torpedo boats and airplanes. If we send these, it will, no doubt, be air pilots next to replace fallen Britishers.

How this "dispatching" of boats and planes is to be done, the committee does not say. The sale of these torpedo boats was blocked once by Attorney-General Jackson—after certain Congressmen got wise to what was going on. Later Mr. Jackson in a tortured opinion said the sale of the overage destroyers, was legal, but at the same time he reiterated his belief in the illegality of the sale of torpedo boats not completed when sold.

Does the Aid the Allies Committee expect the Attorney-General to put the statute to more torture and then come out with an opinion the committee wants? Mr. Jackson is a Houdini, at that. Or is the committee just not worrying about it, expecting that when its job of propagandizing America is done, the people will be for what it wants, legal or not legal?

This committee is a propaganda organization. It was built up carefully as such. It boasts the names of 600 sponsors, and it is impossible to escape the conclusion that the roster was constructed with three objects in view: (1) To get people with a pro-British attitude; (2) to get people with money to pay the propaganda expenses; (3) to get people who would be useful in influencing American action.

All three groups are well represented. The roster is full of Wall Street men, such as J. P. Morgan. There are such pro-British thinkers as Nicholas Murray Butler and President Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore, who got his trend as a Rhodes scholar.

Finally, there is a liberal use of names of writers, movie stars, editors and others. Booth Tarkington is there, and Julius Ochs Adler of the New York Times, but why mention a few? The list is longer than your arm. Col. Frank Knox has his name down, and so does Henry L. Stimson—our Secretary of the Navy and Secretary of War.

This committee has worked skillfully. It has proceeded from the known fact that American public opinion would not now support sending American troops to Europe. But who can doubt what its final hope is? It has organized chapters in every large city. And it must have spent large sums.

This committee is made up of Americans.

New Proposal Goes Too Far For People of Middle West, Kansas City Paper Asserts

From the Kansas City Times.

THE case presented by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies for its latest proposal of aid for England is not nearly so clear-cut and convincing as its previous case for selling the 50 overage destroyers and other obsolescent and superfluous supplies.

The proposal to sell 25 flying fortresses as well as combat planes and torpedo boats presents another problem.

By no reasonable construction could the flying fortresses and presumably the combat planes be regarded as obsolete. So the fundamental objection to the suggested deal is that it would be in the direction of war for which the nation is not ready, either mentally or physically.

It has been argued that the nation could most effectively defend itself by becoming an active ally of England. Public opinion has overwhelmingly rejected this argument. It recognizes the importance of the defeat of Germany in its war to dominate Europe. It is ready to make an immense effort for the national defense, even to the extent of accepting the selective draft. It favors as a defensive measure giving all proper aid to the British. But it is against getting into the war unless its vital interests are directly threatened.

In this situation, the people of the Middle West, in our opinion, are not ready to go along with the new proposal of the White committee.

It is not to be classed with the German propaganda outfit and the British propaganda outfit, which have headquarters in New York and are admittedly foreign-supported. Moreover, it does express what a great many people believe concerning the war.

Our quarrel with the Aid the Allies Committee is that its objective is not out in the open. Everything points to the conclusion that its real purpose is to take the United States into the war. Then why does it not say so? If it did, it at least would have the respect of not carrying a concealed propaganda purpose.

And how much is the committee, in asking for 25 bombing planes, thinking of America's security when only last week it was disclosed that our own army had only 59 heavy bombers and fewer than 300 first-line combat planes?

GOOD-BY TO SPINACH.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SOME extraordinary award for bravery should be bestowed on the technicians of the New York State Agricultural Department. Flying in the face of all the vitamin fanatics who are attempting to make us a nation of grass-eaters, these New York diet experts have come out with the bold assertion that one cup of tomato juice will provide all the Vitamin C an ordinary person's system can use in a day, in addition to a fair portion of Vitamin A.

What makes this stand courageous is that it is probably the first time since vitamins were discovered that anyone has dared suggest they could be found adequately in palatable food. It has become almost a tradition that these health-giving elements will hang out in nothing that goes down any easier than three and one-half tablespoons full of castor oil.

Now we know who it was that spread the false report that the tomato was a poison fruit. It was those gents who were getting ready to foist spinach on us!

On the Science of War

Books in the News

SINCE Maj. George Fielding Eliot's "The Ramparts We Watch" scored a success in 1938, the presses have been pouring out military books written in technical, semi-technical and popular style. They now threaten the crop of detective and mystery novels that has been booming for years.

The days when books on military subjects had a closely limited appeal are gone. They're so far gone that it's not uncommon to find stenographers with books that nobody less military-minded than a Major would have been caught with in the past.

Now the taxpayer wants to know what his money is going to be spent for, the man who may be called into service wants to know a little more about the game, and those who would be stay-at-homes in event of war want to know something about military and naval politics, what the chances are of bombers reaching this country and what odds the United States might face in a possible war.

Among recent military books, one of the best is "The Art of Modern Warfare" (Veritas Press, Inc., New York), by Hermann Foertsch, a Colonel on the German General Staff. It has an introduction by Maj. Eliot. The first third of the book is an excellent condensation of the fundamentals of war and the history of war. The rest of the book sums up the strategical and tactical tenets of the German army. Although some of the author's statements, particularly his conservative views on tanks, have been invalidated by what happened on the Western front, they do not detract from the book.

"The German Army" (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York) is the work of Herbert Rosinski, formerly a lecturer at the German military and naval academies and Chief of Staff for the faculty of military sciences at the University of Berlin. In 1936, he was forced to flee to England because of difficulties with the Nazi regime.

Rosinski's book is an attempt to trace the interrelation of the German army with the life of Germany as a whole. He finds a fundamental incompatibility between Nazi spirit and the traditional spirit of the army. There is much to support his conclusion that "in the 'Leader-General' of the Third Reich, the German Army may well find the prophet who sends it to Armageddon."

"Chemistry in Warfare" (Hastings House, New York) is the product of two chemists, F. A. and M. S. Hessel, and a former army officer, Wellford Martin. It is a concise, thorough outline of chemistry's role in feeding, clothing, sheltering, protecting and killing the soldier. It also answers such questions as "How is iron ore made into guns and armor plate?" and "By what methods can cities be sprayed with gas?" R. R.

Companions for Smoky.

WILL JAMES' "The Dark Horse" and "Horses I Have Known" (Scribners, New York) are worthy companions on the range for Smoky. The first book is the exciting story of Colonel, a thoroughbred with marvelous pedigree, and Pecos, a wild thoroughbred without a pedigree, making their resourceful way together from the time they are colts, in the Western wild.

In the second, the author gathers up a raft of tales about all manner of horses and their riders. It literally overflows with the excitement and color of ranch life.

Both are in the author's straightaway rendering of cowboy talk and are illustrated with drawings from his own remarkable pen—drawings which challenge the stirring powers of the word descriptions. I. D.

E. H. BOSTOCK DIES; 'BARNUM OF BRITAIN'

Englishman, 81, Had Spent 50 Years on Road With Circuses and Theaters.

GLASGOW, Sept. 18 (AP).—The death of Edward H. Bostock, 81 years old, British circus man, was announced today.

Bostock, known as the "Barnum of Britain," spent half a century on the road with circuses, menageries and theaters. He retired in 1931, selling his menagerie to the London Zoological Society. His family had started in the business in 1805.

When boxing kangaroos were all the rage, he trained them. Later, to outdo his rivals, he produced a wrestling lion.

But his favorite animal was Lizzie, an elephant from the African jungles. Lizzie got the colic one day and a Tenbury chemist, who knew little of elephants, nevertheless, mixed a bucket of medicine which Lizzie swallowed. Four years later, Bostock liked to recall, the circus went back to Tenbury and Lizzie recognized the chemist watching the parade and nuzzled him affectionately with her trunk.

BUSINESS MEN FORM DEFENSE GROUP HERE

Members, Who Took Voluntary Training Last July, to Meet Again Oct. 14.

Business and professional men who took a 30-day voluntary military training course at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in July met in the Federal Building last night and formed an organization to aid in the national defense program.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ford Richardson, chief army recruiting officer in the St. Louis area, suggested that the group might form a home-guard unit to serve as National Guard units were called into service. Louis A. Hager Jr., chosen commander of the group, said a large proportion of those who attended the meeting were above the conscription age limit.

Col. Richardson suggested also that the organization might serve by helping to stimulate recruiting, arousing the public to the need of adequate national defense and investigating any existence of any fifth column activities.

The meeting decided to let determination of activities rest with the officers and committees appointed by them. The next meeting will be held Oct. 14.

Sixty-two of the 82 Missourians who composed Company K of the CMTC camp at Fort Leavenworth attended the meeting. Most of the 57 St. Louisans who were at the camp were present.

In addition to Hager, officers were elected as follows: vice-commander, William S. Bryan of Glendale; secretary, Meyer E. Aronoff, 4440 Lindell boulevard; treasurer, Charles G. Krause, 7527 Washington boulevard; sergeant-at-arms, W. H. Bauer, 4229 Russell boulevard.

Chosen members of the Executive Committee were James Lee Johnson of Huntleigh Village, George L. Dyer, 4443 West Pine boulevard, Herman Willer, 5611 Enright avenue; Charles W. Herald Jr., 6 Hortus court; Thomas E. Copley, 3525 Prairie avenue; Harold S. Hutchinson of Vienna, Mo., and Gilmer Merriweather of Kansas City.

JESSIE REED

JESSIE REED, FORMER ZIEGFELD BEAUTY, DIES

Once Among Highest Paid Show Girl, Was Married Five Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP).—Jessie Reed, at one time one of the highest paid show girls in the world, died today at the Chicago Osteopathic Hospital of bronchial pneumonia.

The red-haired beauty, who was glorified by the late Flo Ziegfeld, had undergone a number of blood transfusions, and before her death was constantly under an oxygen tent.

Miss Reed, who had been married five times, first entered the hospital last August, suffering from a serious throat infection. She re-entered the hospital 10 days ago.

The former show girl, whose age was given in the hospital records as 43, had suffered financial reverses in recent years. A woman friend of Miss Reed said she would arrange for her funeral.

She was once the wife of Leonard M. Reno, World War veteran and wealthy advertising man. Previously she had been married to wealthy Dan (Dashing Dan) Caswell, to William T. Young, Indianapolis advertising executive, and to Lew Reed, an actor.

Her last year with the Ziegfeld Follies was in 1914, when she was frequently called the "most glamorous" of the glorified girls.

But with the passing years Miss Reed faded from the public eye until in 1935 she was found in a rooming house, in financial straits. She said then: "I want nothing more than a chance to work. With a little training I still could find a place in a revue."

COMPARES EDUCATION IN U. S. AND IN EUROPE

Supt. Anderson Says Americans Wisely Chose De-centralized School Control.

A contrast between free education in America and nationally controlled systems of instruction of Germany, Italy and Russia was made yesterday by Superintendent of Instruction Homer W. Anderson in a Constitution day address before the St. Louis Chapter of the Sons of the Revolution at the Missouri Athletic Club.

"The framers of our Constitution," he said, "did not provide for a centralized system of education. In this they showed their wisdom. Here in America education is a function of the State and the community. It is close to us. We can make it what we choose. As we elect good or inferior persons to our school boards we determine the education our children shall receive."

The job of education in America, the superintendent went on, has never been adequately done. In 1917 the average educational level of soldiers drafted was the sixth grade, he said, and citizens who register for the present draft will have completed on the average 10 years of schooling. "We have yet to achieve in America," he said, "a high school trained adult population."

"It is not sufficient that schools should teach young Americans to read and write or even to understand the mechanics of our democratic government," Anderson said. "The end of education should be the formation of citizens with understanding and love of their country's free institutions in their minds and hearts.

"It is for this that we are willing to support public schools by taxation," he went on, "that we may train citizens to value their rights, to respect the limitations on personal liberty imposed by the rights of others, in short to assume equally the responsibilities and privileges of their citizenship."

U. S. INDUSTRIAL GAIN OF 10 PCT. FORECAST FOR '40

Bureau of Agricultural Economics Says This Would Bring Workers' Income to 1937 Peak.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted today that industrial production for the year 1940 would show a gain of about 10 per cent over 1939.

Such an improvement, the bureau said in an analysis of the economic situation, would raise incomes of industrial workers to around the 1937 "post-depression" peak or about the average of the 1924-29 period.

Further gains in industrial activity this fall and winter were expected to be developed, the bureau said, by "the cumulative effect of the expanding defense program, the timing of production of the 1941 automobile models, Government buying and other factors pointing to a high rate of activity in the textile industries, the prospect for less than the usual seasonal contraction in residential building, and the recent strength in commodity prices."

The defense program was described as already having had a stimulating effect on various industries, particularly textiles, iron and steel, transportation equipment, ship building and plant construction.

"Preparation for the handling of a greatly enlarged military force in the near future will affect many lines of business such as are necessary in supplying lumber for the building of barracks, light equipment of various kinds, and uniforms," it was said.

The Bureau declared, however, that improvements generated by these factors might be offset by "unfavorable developments in Europe."

"Termination of present hostilities no doubt would have at least a temporarily depressing effect on business sentiment, and would result in some alteration of buying policies pending clarification of the situation," the report said.

"Eventually, the development of the defense program would more than offset the effect of any loss of exports to Great Britain due to the termination of the war, but meanwhile there might be a substantial letdown in domestic buying as well as in the export of war materials."

The Bureau said that in the absence of such "unfavorable" European developments, the domestic demand for farm products should continue to strengthen during the remainder of the year. The general export outlook for farm products continued "very unsatisfactory," the Bureau said.

Cherne on Consciption, What It Will Mean to You they hold religious beliefs against participation in war.

A conscientious objector cannot be compelled under the law to enter combatant training or service in the land or naval forces of the United States. He will not, however, me completely relieved from service. A person adjudged to be a conscientious objector may be compelled to take either (1) training for non-combatant service, as defined by the President, or (2) if he is found to be conscientiously opposed to participation even in non-combatant service, he may be assigned to work of national importance under civilian direction.

All claims for exemption from non-combatant service are to be turned over to the department for investigation and determination by it.

What non-combatant activities are open to conscientious objectors?

Here your only guide is the experience of the last war, since no formal list of non-combatant activities has as yet been prepared. In 1918, President Wilson defined the following as types of non-combatant activity:

1. Service in the Medical Corps, wherever performed. This included service in the sanitary detachments connected with combatant units at the front; service in the division sanitary trains composed of ambulances and field-hospital companies located on the line of communications, at the base in France, and with the troops as well as hospitals in the United States. Supply and repair activities in the Medical Department are also included.

2. Service in the Quartermaster Corps in the United States and in the rear of the zone of operations. It included activity in stevedore companies, labor companies, remount depots, veterinary hospitals, supply depots, bakery companies, the subsistence service, the bathing service, the laundry service, the salvage service, the clothing renovation service, the shoe-repair service, the transportation-repair service and motor truck companies.

3. Engineer service in the United States and in the rear of the zone of operations. Such activity included railroad building, operation and repair; construction of rear-line fortifications and auxiliary defenses; construction of docks, wharves, storehouses and cantonments, as are built by the Corps of Engineers; topographical work, camouflage, map reproduction, supply-depot service, repair service, hydraulic service and forestry service.

What happened to conscientious objectors who refused to accept non-combatant service in the last war?

Men whose attitude in camp was defiant, whose sincerity was questioned, or who were active in propaganda were subject to court-martial. From September, 1917, to November, 1918, 371 professed conscientious objectors were tried by court-martial, convicted and sentenced to terms ranging from three months to 50 years.

All others professing conscientious objection—that is, men who refused to obey military instructions but gave no cause for criticism or who were acquitted by court-martial—were segregated at the Fort Leavenworth camp but were not put under arrest.

The Secretary of War set up a board of inquiry charged with examining personally each man who was found to be a conscientious objector. Those believed to be sincere in their attitude and those willing to serve within the limits of their conscientious scruples were furloughed by the commanding officer at Fort Leavenworth for agricultural service. No person was recommended for such treatment who did not voluntarily agree to receive as his wages from the Government an amount no larger than a private's pay, plus an estimated sum for subsistence, if it was not provided by the employer. Monthly reports as to the industry of such a person were prepared. If a report showed that a man was not working to the best of his ability, his furlough ended automatically.

Reports of the board set up to examine conscientious objectors are summarized by the following table:

Disposal of Conscientious Objectors.	Number.
1. Total cases of objectors inquired into	1697
2. Found to be sincere entirely or in part	1461
3. Found insincere	103
4. Remanded for further inquiry	88
5. Remanded for examination as to mental deficiency	7
6. Otherwise disposed of	38

Maj. Al Williams On Aviation

the taxpayers certainly deserve to get it.

About 107 navy warships have been built since 1930. Of this total, about 40 were defective in point of design and structure. Not one single answer or accounting has been rendered to date. Edison said, after his trip to Hawaii, that the navy's fuel tanks were sticking up in the air like sore thumbs and perfect targets for a sea or air enemy. This latter is evidence of the criminal red tape that has befuddled the navy mind for years.

Away From Desk.

Now, we find the new Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Knox, ex-wartime army man and in no sense professionally trained as such, away from his Washington desk for about three weeks. He, if you please, also tells us about the navy fuel tanks sticking up in the air at Hawaii. Knox hasn't had time to learn about the navy. According to our American way of doing jobs, we sort of expect a new boss to stick pretty tightly to his desk until he gets the hang of things. However, out of sight, out of mind. And with the boss gallivanting around the world, the Washington navy men will have a holiday getting their new and untried pet ideas translated into contracts for warships that should be ready in about six years.

What's all this discussion about the navy, and the warships it thinks it knows how to build; got to do with aviation? The answer is painfully simple. The Battle of Britain is right over Britain, carried there by a foreign airpower, while the British Navy is utterly helpless to drive it away.

The American people want air power. They want air defense that will protect them against all possibilities. And they are getting warships. This is just the same death march played by the British Admirals for the British people during the years 1934-38. These floating iron forts, so persistently called warships, are ineffective in the new kind of war. It's airpower we must have—fewer steam whistles and less gold-braided dreams.

short-term paper and two kinds of long-term loans.

Interest Recently Cut.

The short-term paper consists of three-month, seven-month and 16-month Treasury bills. Interest on all these bills was recently cut by ⅛ of 1 per cent, to 2¼ per cent, 2⅞ per cent and 3⅜ per cent, respectively. The Government issued a total of 13,000,000,000 marks' worth of these bills from the outbreak of the war until June 30, the last date for which figures are available.

Long-term borrowings have taken the form, first, of 27-year Reich loans, and, second, of Treasury notes, which were issued first, for five lears; later for 10 years, and now for 20 years. The first 27-year loans bore 4½ per cent interest, but this has now been cut to 4 per cent. A total of 5,000,000,000 marks' worth of these bonds were issued up to the end of June. The Treasury bills have borne 4 per cent interest throughout. The total of notes issued is now approaching four billion marks.

BRITAIN IN MARKET AGAIN FOR FREIGHTERS

Need for Ships Indicates Heavy Losses During Recent Air Raids.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Britain's re-entry into the American shipping market to purchase freighters of 8000 tons was announced yesterday following indications of huge shipping lossse during recent air raids.

The picture of destruction, pieced together from censored European reports and information reaching New York maritime offices, showed both England and Germany as sufferers.

Britain's need for additional ships was revealed by a member of the British Purchasing Commission who said:

"We are in the market again. We've been out of it for two or three months. We're looking for freighters, about 8000 deadweight tons."

The extent of British losses was hinted at in the admiralty report for the week ending Sept. 9 when it said listed losses did not include tonnage sunk by air attacks Sept. 7, 8 and 9, because "full details of such attacks are not yet available."

The report listed a loss of 54,547 tons. Germany reported 188,500 tons had been destroyed.

Charles Jeddlica, editor of the New York Maritime Register, said he had heard German shipping losses in the Norwegian campaign had been tremendous. Little of this loss has been acknowledged officially.

Associated Press records, which include only verified losses, show 900 ships totaling 3,321,164 tons have been destroyed.

U. S. MARINES FLYER BAILS OUT OF DISABLED PLANE IN STORM

Lands on Desert in Arizona and Walks 4 Hours Before Reaching Highway.

GILA BEND, Ariz., Sept. 18 (AP).—Capt. W. D. Winfree of the United States Marine Corps, Quantico, Va., bailed out of a disabled scout bomber yesterday and landed safely. He walked across the desert four hours before reaching a highway.

The plane, which Winfree said developed engine trouble when bucking a rain storm, crashed and burned.

Winfree was piloting one of six planes being ferried from San Diego, Cal., to Quantico. The remainder of the flight continued to Tucson, Ariz., for an overnight stop.

POCAHONTAS

--- Poor Man's Fuel

You buy coal by the load, but you buy heat by the year. Pocahontas, highly efficient smokeless fuel, costs you more by the load than the high volatile coal you have burned in past years—but if you buy it, your heat shouldn't cost any more by the year.

A pair of overalls that costs twice as much may wear three times as long. A house with just a little firmer foundation may stand for years after the cheaper building has been wrecked to make a parking lot. Cheap first cost doesn't mean thrifty performance. It's like that with Pocahontas.

Soot is waste. You buy none in Pocahontas. Smoke is waste. You buy none in Pocahontas. Ashes are waste. Pocahontas leaves but little. When you buy this coal, you buy concentrated heat, and that's why it's the poor man's fuel — the friend of any householder who hasn't money to waste, but must get full value.

Order from your dealer. Look for the name — Pocahontas — on the delivery ticket. Accept no substitute. You'll be heat happy.

A LITTLE provoked by all the furors created in Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex., over the dual world premiere of "The Westerner," Gov. Goldwyn wired right back that the idea sounded swell enough to begin preparations immediately on a story which will call plenty celluloid attention to those hardy pioneers who brought glory to the New England States. "HIT PARADE OF 1941," a Republic musical, offers a casting situation funny even to think about—Mary Boland as a department store owner and Franklin Pangborn as her floorwalking manager! . . . Bandman Artie Shaw, the ex-Lana Turner spouse, wasn't exactly in tears about it, but he predicted yesterday on the set of "Second Chorus" that the most graceful of all dances, the waltz, was headed for extinction. "Pocket-sized dance floors and over-crowded dance halls have doomed it," said Artie. "I doubt if more than one couple in a thousand, under 30 years of age, knows how to waltz." . . . Marjorie Weaver looked at herself in a new test at Twentieth Century-Fox and ran screaming from the projection room. She's now on a diet that will continue until she sheds eight pounds.

—o-o—

DUE TO a terrible mistake on the part of the telephone people, the names of several supposedly "unlisted" stars made their appearance in the new Los Angeles directory. Mary Beth Hughes now complains that autograph hunters are gathering on her doorstep as early as 7 in the morning. "It would be more interesting if a few of them were more than 11 years old," added Mary Beth . . . Two important pictures, "Comrade X" and "Arise My Love" are immersed in Breen-office troubles. One is in the making, the other finished . . . When Jackie Cooper left the MGM lot after finishing his boy-role contract four years ago he hitch-hiked his way back to Hollywood. This week, when re returned at 18, to star in "Fighting Sons," he rolled through the big gates in a special $3800 job.

—o-o—

DEANNA DURBIN and Vaughn Paul, her boy friend for 24 months, expect to end all gossip about their prospective marriage—by getting married some time around the Christmas holidays. Deanna becomes 18 on Dec. 4 . . . Nice and unpublicized was the gesture of Twentieth Century-Fox in finding a stenographic job for 19-year-old Margaret Collins. She's the daughter of Eddie, the comic, who had just graduated into important money (without a chance to save any of it) before his sudden death a few days ago . . . Those wild canards about Eleanor Powell's dancing career being over, due to a serious operation, were split wide open this week. Eleanor reported back to MGM and rehearsed some difficult routines for her forthcoming picture.

—o-o—

GARBO IS struggling, as usual, to gain weight—this time through a stiff course of Russian ballet lessons, which she's been told will build her up physically. MGM is still looking for a Garbo story . . . Mrs. Calvin Roy Darnell called upon Mr. Darryl Zanuck recently and allowed that her little girl, Linda, was getting all tuckered out. Too many pictures, six in a row—so after "Chad Hanna," Linda will get a rest. Besides, Zanuck cagily reasons in granting the vacation, too many pictures aren't good for any actress . . . Clark Gable's five-year contract is the longest and most involved document in Hollywood legal history. Due to many special clauses, it runs 72 pages and looks like a book.

CITY TO REFUND BOND ISSUE OF $1,396,000 AT 1 1-2 PCT.

Annual Saving in Interest Put at $34,900 Annually; $6002 Premium Provided For.

The city arranged to refund $1,396,000 in bonds yesterday at an annual saving in interest of at least $34,900. The maturing issue bears interest of 4 and 4½ per cent and the refunded issue will pay 1½ per cent. In addition the city will receive a premium of $6002 from the lowest bidder, a syndicate of seven Eastern financial houses headed by Lehman Bros. of New York.

Comptroller Louis Nolte said the refunding was necessary because funds were not available for payment of the issue at maturity Oct. 1. The bonds are part of the 1923 issue, for building purposes. The refunded bonds will mature in five, 10 and 15 years. Nolte said the 1½ per cent rate was the lowest ever obtained by the city for that type of bond.

ENGLISH GIRLS PASS THROUGH CITY ON WAY TO NEW HOME

Two Daughters of Foreign Office Employe Will Live With Head of Stephens College.

Two English school girls, daughters of an employe of the British Foreign Office, passed through St. Louis yesterday en route to Columbia, Mo., where they will make their home with Dr. James M. Wood, president of Stephens College.

The girls are Unity Urquhart, 14 years old, and her sister, Jennifer, 12. Unity will enter Stephens College as a high school junior and Jennifer will enroll as a freshman at the University High School at Columbia.

They left Liverpool, England, with their mother, Mrs. Robert W. Urquhart, and two other sisters on Aug. 2, "before the bombing began," as Unity put it. At New York, the group was delayed a week when two of the children contracted chicken pox. From there they went to Buffalo, where two sisters, Elizabeth, 9, and Christine, 5, were taken into the homes of Buffalo friends. Mrs. Urquhart returned to New York and is preparing to return to England.

PERMANENT BIG-SCALE ARMS INDUSTRY PREDICTED FOR U. S.

Publisher of "Business Week" Tells Advertising Club Next Generation Will Pay For It.

The present large-scale defense program will result in a permanent arms industry in this country, Willard Chevalier, publisher of "Business Week" and a vice-president of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., of New York, told members of the St. Louis Advertising Club yesterday.

"We will never again permit ourselves to be caught inadequately prepared," he said. "The armament industry is here to stay, for the requirements of American defense are not minimized by two oceans or by other physical conditions ceasing to exist. Obsolescence of equipment will hereafter keep the armament industry in operation in order to keep pace with changing defense requirements."

Chevalier said the arms industry was "the new industry for which there have been frequent demands as a means of bringing prosperity." He said he was not hopeful, however, that the arms trade would "bring any permanent benefits," adding that he believed the next generation would pay for it with a lower standard of living.

It will take two years under normal procedure for Dreyer to obtain citizenship. His salary was $2500 a year. Work at the postoffice is being done by the four clerks.

'Lady of Lakes' Performance at E. St. Louis Again Tonight and Tomorrow Night.

More than 5000 East St. Louisans attended the first performance of the fifth annual Lady of the Lakes pageant last night at Lake Park, south of East St. Louis.

High point of the evening was the entrance on a barge of Miss Margery Ann May, who was crowned "Lady of the Lakes" at the Imperial Federation ball last November. She was accompanied by "Father Neptune," who in real life is State Senator Louis J. Menges. Miss May is the daughter of George P. May, vice-president of the Union Electric Co. of Illinois.

WPA TO CENTRALIZE FINANCING ACTIVITIES AT JEFFERSON CITY

Branch at Springfield to Be Moved to Capital, Probably This Week.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 18 (AP).—John M. McCann, district WPA director, announced that the finance department of the district WPA office will be moved to Jefferson City, probably the latter part of the week.

This is in keeping with the announced plan to centralize the finance department in the State WPA office, McCann explained. The move will mean the transferring of about 15 persons from the district office here. Max Agan, district finance officer, will be transferred to Moberly to handle an area finance office there, McCann said.

Complete details of the transfer will not be worked out until later in the week, he added. About a year ago, part of the district finance department was transferred to Jefferson City.

OIL FIRMS MERGER HINTED

TULSA, Sept. 18 (AP).—Merger of the Skelly Oil Co. and other oil and gas interests controlled by J. Paul Getty with the Tide Water Associated Oil Co. is under discussion, reliable sources said last night. No official negotiations have been held, however.

While top executives here of Skelly and Tide Water parried queries, it was said that the merger was viewed as a possibility for "early in 1941, in the interests of economy."

8 U.S. NEWSPAPER MEN BACK FROM THE ORIENT

Only British Victory or American Action Can Prevent Turmoil There They Say

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18 (AP).—Only a victory for Britain or a stern policy on the part of the United States—or both—could save teh Far East from new turmoil and territorial change, in the opinion of eight American newspaper men who returned here today.

The group left by way of Pan-American Airways from Los Angeles, Aug. 10, and visited New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Manila and Hongkong on a 30,000-mile tour. They came back from Hawaii on the liner Matsonia.

J. K. Walsh, edtior of the Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette, who represented the Associated Press, said every country was "pathetically anxious" to present its case to this country and that "there is plenty of worry about what Japan is going to do. They aren't worrying much about Germany—unless Germany should get the British navy."

Walsh, as spokesman for the group, gave this work picture of major points on the trip:

Hongkong: "It probably could be taken in two months. But leading Chinese in Singapore said China would never be conquered because the war for the first time has brought national unity."

Singapore: "Strongly defended, but not as much so as might be possible if England gets a good crack at the Italian navy and can spare more ships. They were tremendously encouraged in Singapore by news that Britain was to get 50 American destroyers."

New Zealand and Australia. "Both countries are making tremendous strides to become militarily self-sufficient, and still are pouring men, munitions and food supplies to the mother country. They'll be self-contained in a few years at the present rate."

Dutch East Indies: "No one will take this country without a hell of a fight. They've a fine navy and air force; oil fields and all harbors are mined; bamboo spears to impale parachutists stick up at every level spot; they picked up every Nazi the day Hollnad was invaded."

Others on the trip weer Roy Howard, publisher of the New York World Telegram; Ansel Talbert, New York Herald Tribune; Harold Callender, New York Times; James Bassett, Los Angeles Times; Sephen Richards, United Press, Detroit; Peter Edson, Newspaper Enterprise Association, Cleveland, and Michael Forstadt, Kings Features, New York.

$423,319 INCREASE IN CITY'S REVENUE

Income for First 5 Months of Fiscal Year, $4,528,644—Expenses Up Also.

The city's revenue in the first five months of the current fiscal year, which began April 9, was $4,528,644, an increase of $423,319 over the revenue of $4,105,324 in the comparative five months of the preceding fiscal year, it is shown in a report submitted by Comptroller Louis Nolte yesterday to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Disbursements in the five months totaled $8,515,400, an increase of $115,512 over the disbursements of $8,399,887 in the like period of the 1939-40 fiscal year.

Most of the increase in revenue was attributed to the tax of 2 cents a package on cigarettes, which became effective July 18, 1939. License collections, including the cigarette tax, were $2,139,676, compared with $1,800,878 in the first five months of the preceding fiscal year.

NAZIS 'MASTER RACE'; POLES 'BENEATH YOU'

Conquered People Called Unfit for Inter-Marriage With Germans in Berlin Leaflets.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—Thousands of leaflets extolling the German "master race" and vilifying Poles as second-rate human beings were distributed to Berlin households yesterday by the "Volksbund for Germandom Abroad."

The circulars bore a purple Roman-letter "P" against a yellow, diamond-shaped background and called attention to Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's order for all Polish laborers, both men and women, to wear such an insignia sewed on the right chest side of every garment. Poles were called unfit for intermarriage or even comradeship with Germans.

"German living space of the future will contain many non-German elements," the Volksbund declared. "Therefore, it is important to educate our entire people up to the dangers lurking in such living together with foreign elements."

The conquered Poles were described as especially despicable, the leaflets said, "because the atrocities in Poland compelled the Fuehrer to protect our Germans there with our armed forces."

The leaflets then cite a series of alleged Polish atrocities, and exclaims:

"Fellow German! The Pole is never our comrade! He stands beneath every German on your farm or in your factory. Be just, as becomes a German, but never forget that you belong to the master race.

"If anybody comes and tells you his Pole is decent, then counter with: 'Today apparently everybody knows one decent Pole, just as at another time he knew one decent Jew.'

"The obsequiousness shown by the Pole toward the German farmer is perfidy. His friendly demeanor is a lie. The greatest care is essential to prevent Poles from grouping together and possibly engaging in espionage."

Farmers and factory owners were warned not to permit Polish laborers to write long letters home lest they contain untrue statements about Germany. The Poles, moreover, are to be given no cash.

INDUSTRY TO TAKE INVENTORY OF PLANTS FOR DEFENSE

Head of Factory Association Says Survey Will Reach Down Into Thousands of Small Shops.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—A survey of the nation's industrial assets for possible use in the defense program was announced tonight by H. W. Prentis Jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Thousands of plants, not now engaged in manufacturing supplies for the military forces, may find their tools, machines and floor space vital cogs in the defense program," he said.

He disclosed plans for the factory inventory in a speech before a New York regional meeting of manufacturers.

"Under M-day plans," he explained, "all large plants came under the scrutiny of the procurement division. This new inventory will reach down into thousands of small plants, in an effort to reveal their potentialities for defense production. This is an inventory by and of industry itself."

PEORIA MAN DIES OF INJURIES SUFFERED IN FIGHT TUESDAY

Autopsy in East St. Louis Indicates He Had Been Struck on Head With Sharp Instrument.

Raymond Fritsch, a steamfitter of Peoria, Ill., died today at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, of a fractured skull suffered yesterday afternoon during a fight with an unidentified man at Fourth street and Bond avenue, East St. Louis.

Police, called to the scene by spectators, found Fritsch, who was 58 years old, in a semi-conscious condition and unable to tell them what had happened to him.

Spectators told police Fritsch had been in a fight with another man who fled when Fritsch fell. An autopsy indicated he had been struck on the head with a sharp instrument.

ZOO'S MALE TAPIR GETS MATE THAT WILL PULL A TOY WAGON

Pet Trained by Nicaraguan Family Is 14 Months Old, Weighs 175 Pounds.

A tapir which will shake hands, lie down at a command, and pull a child's wagon was bought today for $300 by the St. Louis Zoo.

It is a 14-month-old female named Edni, brought here from Nicaragua. The Zoo has long had a male tapir and has been anxious to provide it with a mate.

Purchase was made from Gates A. Halfin, owner of the National Pet Shop, 3301 Olive street, who acquired it from one of his dealers. Halfin said the tapir had been trained by a Nicaraguan family who kept it as a pet. It weighs about 175 pounds.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS UNDECIDED ON WHEN TO PICK NEW LEADER

Northern Members Say They Are Entitled to Speaker Rayburn's Former Job.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—House Democrats awaited today the return of many of their number who attended the funeral of Speaker Bankhead in Jasper, Ala., before deciding whether to choose a party leader now or wait until the next session in January.

Sam Rayburn of Texas was elevated to the speakership from the leader's post, and yesterday two Democrats urged that a Northerner be selected for the latter job. Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois said that a Northerner was "entitled" to the job because Rayburn was a Southerner, and Martin J. Kennedy of New York advocated a caucus of New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois Democrats to unite behind one of their own number.

John E. Rankin of Mississippi is an announced candidate for the position. Virginia members said yesterday they would place Clifton A. Woodrum of their State in nomination. Others mentioned include John McCormack of Massachusetts, Patrick J. Boland of Pennsylvania and Jere Cooper of Tennessee.

MARION TALLEY GETS CUSTODY OF DAUGHTER FOR 9 MONTHS

Six-Year-Old Asks Father to Visit Her in California; He Tells Her to Be a Good Soldier.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Betty Ruth Eckstrom, 6-year-old daughter of Marion Talley, was back in her mother's custody today after a 15-minute conversation with a New York Judge.

Justice Aron Steuer declined to say whether the child had confided which parent she prefers, but ruled yesterday that the little girl should spend the next nine months with her mother, the former opera singer.

As she rode down an elevator with her mother and father, Adolph Eckstrom, a voice teacher, the girl began to cry. "Daddy, please come out to California and visit me."

"Be a good soldier," he replied.

After the decision, Miss Talley withdrew an action citing her estranged husband for contempt on the ground he refused to return the child to her under terms of a previous custody ruling.

Miss Talley lives in Beverly Hills, Cal.

WHEAT MARKET TOP RANGE CENT HIGHER AT CLOSE

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP).—Buying attributed to mills apparently to lift hedges as a result of flour business or to accumulate grain for future requirements helped to lift wheat prices as much as a cent a bushel at times today.

Some purchasing also was attributed to dealers encouraged by prolonging of the Battle of England without a successful invasion attempt and by firmness of securities.

Wheat closed ½@1¼c higher than yesterday. Sept., 76⅞@77c; Dec., 77½@78c. Corn ⅝c lower to ⅛c higher, Sept. 61¾; Dec. 55⅝@⅝; oats; ⅛@⅜c higher.

Pit brokers attributed some of the buying to milling interests, commenting that flour consumption was at least of normal proportions, in view of rising industrial activity. Some purchasing also was credited to the more encouraged feeling in some quarters regarding the war and chances of the British to withstand invasion.

Winnipeg wheat prices, which have been at minimum levels since late in June, dropped 3 cents a bushel or more, to the new minimums announced yesterday. The price for October delivery wheat there was at a minimum of 70 cents a bushel, or about 6 cents under Chicago prices for September delivery.

The Argentine Government estimates acreage needed to wheat at approximately 17,053,000 acres, which, although smaller than last year and below average, was larger than many traders had expected, in view of the poor start. Recent reports indicated conditions have been improving.

Corn and oats showed little change, but rye advanced with wheat.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 18.—In the cash grain section of the market today wheat was ¼@⅜c higher; corn ⅛c off.

Sales made on the floor of the exchange were as follows:

Wheat—No. 1 red winter, 84c; No. 2 red garlicky, 78¾c; No. 3 red garlicky, 78¾c; rejected, 81¾@⅞c.

Corn—No. 1 yellow, 65c.

Winnipeg Wheat to "Peg" Low.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 18 (AP).—Wheat futures in prices on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange appeared to have settled back on their new pegs for another prolonged stay when operations ceased today after a fairly active session in which traders experienced their first flurry of activity in almost three months.

During the first few minutes of trading, mills and exporters attempted to buy quotations above the new minimum level announced by the council of the exchange yesterday, but their efforts failed and prices sank to the pegged levels of 70 cents a bushel for October wheat, 71⅝ cents for December and 75¾ cents for May.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES 3 HIGHER TO 2 LOWER

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Improved business in cotton goods attracted a broader demand for cotton futures today and the prices held up well. The prospect of weather favorable to crop development was largely offset as a market factor.

Leading spot interests bought October delivery and increasing support came from trade and mill interests.

Late prices were unchanged to 3 points higher: Oct. 9.39; Dec. 9.36; March 9.24. Initial prices were: Oct., 9.36; Dec., 9.33; Jan. unquoted; Mar., 9.21; May, 9.05; July, 8.84.

STOCK GROUP HAS FOURTH CONSECUTIVE PRICE RISE

Leaders Improve at Outset and After Sell-Off Market Turns Firm—Battle of England Still Holds Volume Down.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Stock prices advanced today for the four consecutive market session.

The rise was fractional among most leaders and volume was limited, but observers noted that the majority of transactions occurred on the rise and that selling pressure was little action.

Sales were 479,390 shares.

Final prices were largely a reflection of first-hour quotations. In between the opening and close were about three hours of sagging quasi-stagnation.

Some market men said testing operations during the day had shown the path of least resistance to be upward.

There were two spot reasons for this, they said: The continual stiffening of England's air defenses and a growing belief that the new Federal excess profits tax would not be nearly as drastic as originally outlined.

Adding to market strength was the Pittsburgh luncheon speech of Irving S. Olds, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, who said the company was able, through the "flexibility" of the steel industry, to complete many of its Government contracts far ahead of contract time and that, also because of flexibility, there would be an ample of supply of steel.

Day's Best Performers.

Best performers of the day included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, Douglas, United Aircraft, Sperry, Air Reduction, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Eastman, American Telephone, Western Union, Great Northern preferred.

Bonds also gained a bit. Commodities followed an uneven path throughout the day. The London market, in a session cut short by an air raid, remained steady.

Best advancers in the curb included Allied Products, Aluminum of America, Jones & Laughlin Steel and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

News of the Day.

Predicting at least two years of top production for steel companies, the magazine "Iron Age" said: "Those in Washington and in the industry who are in closest touch with the requirements of the defense program are of the opinion that the full impact on the steel industry may not be felt before the first quarter of next year.

"It is likewise the opinion of these same authorities that not less than two years of high activity for the steel industry lie ahead, regardless of the duration or outcome of the war."

Followers of retail shares were interested in a prediction by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics that industrial production, rising 10 per cent this year over last, would raise incomes of industrial workers to the average of the 1924-1929 period.

POWER OUTPUT REBOUNDS TO A NEAR-RECORD RATE

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Electric power output in the week ended Sept. 14 totaled 2,638,634,000 kilowatt hours, within an ace of the highest on record, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Production rebounded 7.1 per cent from 2,462,622,000 in the preceding week, the latest day week preceding and was 7.9 per cent ahead of 2,444,371,000 in the comparable 1939 week.

The advance, sharp as it was, failed to measure up to seasonal expectations. Hence the Associated Press power index, based on 1929-30 as 100, declined to 128.9 from 129 a week earlier. The index, adjusted for seasonal trend, stood at 125.2 a year ago.

1940	1939	1938	1937	1934-36
Low 121.4	112.3	102.8	111.8	91.9

Percentage gains over a year ago were reported as follows by the institute:

New England 6.1, Middle Atlantic 7.9, Central industrial 11.8, West Central 2.7, Southern State 2.9, Rocky Mountain 9.4, Pacific Coast 6.1.

SECURITIES PRICES STRONGER ON THE LONDON MARKET

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Prices strengthened in the securities market today and volume expanded as more members attended the session.

Curtailment of trading time by one hour, started yesterday, may have influenced the greater interest, brokers said.

British Government bonds shared in the increased activity and prices closed unchanged to a point higher.

Demand for gold shares centered on dividend-paying kaffirs. Both local and Rhodesian Town interests were on the buying side.

Leading industrials were firm to a trifle higher throughout the list. Gains appeared for such shares as Courtaulds, Imperial Tobacco and British American Tobacco.

Oils and coppers held their ground. Domestic rails stayed in the background.

In the foreign bond market Argentine issues improved again under impetus of talk Britain planned to float a big loan with the South American nation.

Silk.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Spot silk (60-day bids): Japanese crack double extra, 9 per cent seriplane, 13-15s, $2.54½.

Raw silk futures No. 1 closed ½ lower to ⅛ higher. Sales, 100 bales. Close: Oct. 2.51½ bid; Jan., 2.50.

Carol, With His 'Bibi,' Lots of Cash, But No Country, Seeking Safe Refuge

Few Nations of Europe Willing to Risk Nazi Fury by Taking Pair In — Never Too Welcome in His Romantic Wanderings.

(Editor's Note: This is the third of four articles.)

By ROGER D. GREENE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Driven from his throne, ex-King Carol II of Rumania today faces the prospect of becoming forever a man without a country.

Rebuffed by France, the haven of his first exile in 1925-30, the royal Balkan outcast and his fading flame-tressed Magda "Bibi" Lupescu, have been variously reported seeking a refuge in the United States, Canada and South America while temporarily residing in Portugal.

Few nations in war-nerved Europe at present would be willing to risk the displeasure of Adolf Hitler by harboring the fallen monarch who once opposed Hitler and then, in a futile attempt to save his crown, tried too late to hop aboard the Nazi train.

Even in his happier days, when Carol voluntarily became an exile and drifted for five years with Magda Lupescu, the ex-King ran into many obstacles.

And France set sharp-eyed "flics"—agents of the Surete Generale, or secret police—to watch his every move.

Pair of Opera Glasses.

Carol's first exile was plagued, too, by a little matter of his morganatic first wife, "Zizi" Lambrino, who embarrassingly took up residence a short block from Carol's red brick villa shared by Mme. Lupescu and seven dogs in Neuilly, just outside Paris.

Carol's royal blood-pressure boiled dangerously when it was pointed out to him that "Zizi"—with the aid of a pair of opera glasses—could look directly into the rooms of his retreat with "Bibi."

And he raged when his ingenious first wife, mother of his first-born morganatic son, Mircea, paraded the boy in front of the villa and had him pipe shrilly, over and over:

"Papa! Papa! Papa! . . ."

Mme. Lambrino, a commoner with whom Carol had eloped in 1916, had long since taken refuge in Paris. She had received threats, she said, that her son by Carol would be kidnaped—lest he become a pretender to the Rumanian throne—and would be made a twentieth century counterpart of the ill-fated "man in the iron mask."

Madame "Zizi" then twisted the knife by suing Carol for $400,000 alimony and demanding that their child be recognized under the name of Mircea von Hohenzollern. (Carol's father was Ferdinand of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen).

Britain Tolerated Him.

Apparently the case was settled out of court, but soon after the "Papa"-shouting episode, Carol and his red-headed charmer, Magda Lupescu, fled to England, where they secluded themselves in Surrey, occasionally turning up at a London theater. Out of friendship for his mother, Queen Marie, the granddaughter of Britain's own Queen Victoria, the British Government tolerated Carol and his "Bibi" until it was discovered that Carol, violating his pledge, had plotted to seize the Rumanian throne.

As always, Carol's exit was dramatic. As reporters swarmed about his Surrey estate, Carol resorted to a ruse. Suddenly a huge black motorcar, with curtains drawn, dashed from his country mansion and bowled at terrific speed along the highway to London. The reporters scrambled into their cars and sped in pursuit.

The chase swept into traffic-jammed London and only then did the reporters discover that the car's occupants were—two small children!

Carol emerged from his Surrey home grinning broadly, and drove serenely with Magda Lupescu to Dover en route to France.

His Dramatic Return.

In 1930, he made a dramatic return from exile to seize the Rumanian throne.

Now, 10 years later, he apparently starts his second exile in a better financial status.

Besides a $60,000 annual "pension" guaranteed him by the Rumanian Government as he fled, he has reportedly cached the tidy sum of $4,000,000 in a London bank, along with $400,000 worth of shares in the Suez Canal as an anticipated nestegg against just such a rainy day as now engulfs him.

Yesterday investigators for Rumania's new dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu, reported they had rounded up $12,000,000 in one bank, in shares and cash, accredited to Carol's account. They also said they had found $8,000,000 worth of shares in the National Bank of Rumania. They expect to find more hidden wealth.

RED CROSS PROMISES BRITAIN PROMPT AID ON VALID PLEAS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The American Red Cross promised "the stricken British people" today "to act promptly and generously on all legitimate requests for assistance."

Chairman Norman H. Davis said it was "thanks to the generosity of the American public which oversubscribed our $20,000,000 war fund appeal and to the action of Congress in making available $50,000,000 for certain categories of European relief" that action was possible.

The American Red Cross, he said, has spent almost $5,000,000 in England, $20,000 of which has just been cabled for refugee cottages for infants whose homes have been wrecked.

Other aid included shipments of condensed milk, sugar, molasses, clothing, hospital bedding, ambulances, blood transfusion apparatus and operating tables.

NO YOUNG GIRLS EMPLOYED IN TAVERNS, INSPECTORS SAY

Only Violations Reported Found Here Were Failure to Close at Proper Hour.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 18.—Two inspectors of the State Liquor Control Supervisor's office have reported to Supervisor C. R. Noel on their tour of inspection of several St. Louis taverns and night clubs, last Saturday night and early Sunday.

The inspectors reported that they found nine places open after midnight, the legal closing time on Saturday, and that some of them were open until 3:30 a. m. or later.

The only violation of law which they discovered was in keeping these places open beyond the time fixed. They said they saw no young girls employed in any of the places and saw no soliciting of customers by women, or any form of disorderly conduct. Supervisor Noel said he would turn over the inspectors' report to the St. Louis Police Board and Excise Commissioner.

ACTION ON PLANT TO PROCESS COAL DELAYED BY SURVEY

St. Clair Board Has Received Authority to Issue Bonds for Project.

Action on a proposed plant in East St. Louis to process St. Clair County coal is being delayed by the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors pending completion of an engineering survey which is not expected to be finished for several months.

The Board of Supervisors has received authority from the Illinois Legislature to issue bonds for such a plant and has entered into a contract with Stifel, Nicolaus & Co. of St. Louis for financing, but has taken no further steps toward issuing the bonds.

The survey is being made by the St. Louis Engineering firm of Boyles & Kinsey to determine what the output of the proposed plant should be and what type of processing should be used in producing smokeless fuel.

BIDS FOR MORE MISSISSIPPI PARKWAY DREDGING ORDERED

Sand Fill to Be Placed Behind Wall Between Alt and Jersey County Line.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 18 (AP)—Bids will be taken by the State Highway Division Friday for additional dredging along the route of the proposed Mississippi River parkway between Alton and the Pere Marquette State Park near Grafton.

A contract will be awarded for 1,000,000 cubic yards of grading to construct a sand fill along the river's edge between Alton and the Jersey County line.

Sand dredged from the river bed will be placed hydraulically behind a stone retaining wall to form a roadbed for the proposed scenic parkway, planned ultimately as a dual-lane highway.

$4821 U. S. TAX LIEN FILED AGAINST WESTON

Action Comes as Ousted Union Agent Is on Trial With John P. Nick.

A $4821 tax lien against Clyde A. Weston on deficiency income assessments through 1937 from 1935, when he and John P. Nick took over Local 143 of the movie operators' union, was filed in United States District Court yesterday by the Collector of Internal Revenue.

Nick, former czar of the union, and Weston, ousted business agent, were presenting their defense across the hall from the Clerk's office in their racketeering and Sherman Act trial, in the court of United States Judge John Caskie Collet. The lien was the result of months' investigation by the field force here, reported to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in Washington and referred to the Collector with instructions to file.

A $21,005 income tax lien, based on deficiency assessments for 1935-38, inclusive, was filed against J. H. Kinealy, who recently surrendered in the Missouri Supreme Court his license to practice law. Kinealy, whose office was in the Paul Brown Building, specialized in patent matters.

A $681 deficiency lien for 1936 was filed against J. R. and Janet Van Raalte, 1002 Arcade Building.

NINE ACRES OF RAW CORK BURN IN BALTIMORE FIRE

Blaze Sweeps Plant Where $500,000 Year's Supply of Firm Is Stored.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18 (AP).—Firemen poured tons of water today on piles of flaming cork, remnants of the Crown Cork and Seal Co.'s $500,000 year's supply which burned yesterday, giving Baltimore its most spectacular fire in years.

More than 400 firemen and most of the city's available apparatus fought the 15-alarm blaze in the storage plant containing nine acres of raw cork, baled in piles 30 feet high.

Not until early today was the fire under control. It had spread so swiftly that the fire department asked commercial radio stations to broadcast orders for firemen off duty to report to their stations.

About 20 firemen were treated for burns or were overcome by smoke.

CASE Q-152: Linda B., aged 40, has never married. "Oh I simply had to call you, Dr. Crane," she said over the phone a few minutes ago, and she was crying: "I don't have any real friends. Even my brother and sister don't even write to thank me for their birthday presents or Christmas gifts. I've tried to be unselfish and generous, but I don't think it pays. The selfish people seem to be the ones who are happy. I don't see any purpose in living any longer."

DIAGNOSIS: Some flippant readers will say this is only an old maid's despondency. But I get thousands of such cries through the mail in connection with this column, and they come from young girls of 16 to 20, as well as from boys and men of all ages. Other doctors can verify my experience.

There are, of course, times when everybody may feel blue and disconsolate. Occasionally the weather and our physical condition conspire to help produce the despondency. The day that I am writing this Case Record, for example, is blue and gloomy. I have already had four calls from patients today, all of whom were despondent.

THE GREATEST single cause of unhappiness is absence of love. This involves our expenditure of affection on somebody else, plus our reception of love from others. Complete happiness demands reciprocity of affection. Human beings are so constituted that they simply must experience love of God and love of some human being, or they lose zest for life. The best prescription to combat Coralie's approaching insanity in yesterday's Case Record would be an ardent sweetheart who would sweep her off her feet.

THE SAME PRESCRIPTION holds for Linda today. Doctors can prescribe such a medicine but unfortunately pharmacists cannot fill such prescriptions.

One reason why I have publicly championed the formation of "Acquaintance Clubs" whereby we could properly present eligible men and women to each other, is because I am in a unique position to see the tremendous havoc in unhappiness, ill health and neurotic ailments which beset America just because attractive personalities are shrivelling and withering from lack of contact with responsive members of the opposite sex.

You'd Never Take Him for an Actor

Unassuming Bill Holden Not Handsome But He Has What It Takes to Make Good

By Virginia Irwin

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 18.

IN A DARK projection room out here on one of the movie lots not much more than a year ago, a Hollywood director and a Hollywood agent were looking over a screen test of a young woman. The agent was spouting superlatives about the gal and practically drowning out the screen dialogue with arguments as to why his client should be put under contract. All of a sudden a young man moved into a scene with the girl. The director stared, popeyed, sat for a moment in unbelief, and then stopped the film right in the middle of the works.

"Whatsamatter, don't ya like her?" whined the agent.

"Hell, what's the difference?" shouted the director on his way to the door. "I've found 'Golden Boy.'"

"Ya don't mean that punk?" moaned the agent, incredulously, pointing at the now bare screen.

"I sure do," the director yelled back, already half way to his office.

Whereupon the director, who was Rouben Mamoulian and who had been searching for his "Golden Boy" for three months, called the "punk," who was William Holden, an unknown on the Paramount lot, and told him to get the you-know-what over to the Columbia Studios, and the rest is the story of just about the most meteoric career that was ever carved out of Hollywood.

Since Bill Holden was first seen upon the screen last September in the movie version of Clifford Odetts "Golden Boy," he has made five big pictures and had the leads in four of them.

"It seems as though my career has taken a very easy course," shy Bill Holden told me as we sat on some steps outside a sound stage the other day soaking up a little California sunshine. "But I'm not kidding myself. There'll be a couple of rocks I'll have to hit before it's all over."

Off the set and out of makeup Bill looks less like a movie actor than anything running loose in Hollywood. He is very definitely not a handsome lad and in profile his face is dished out like a ski jump. The Paramount publicity department has been trying to put Bill's charm down on paper, but he's got the blurb writers stumped and they just content themselves with shaking their heads and murmuring over and over, "Boy, but can that kid act."

Bill, himself, doesn't offer much help. He just runs his fingers through his stringy brown hair and acts sort of helpless when you make him talk about himself.

"Funny movie actor you are," I chided him, "Why don't you make up a few lies if you think the truth is too plain."

But Bill said he guessed the truth would do and we eventually got around to the fact that he was born in O'Fallon, Ill., and that his papa was once a chemist in an East St. Louis packing plant.

"GOLDEN BOY" BILL HOLDEN . . . BORN AT O'FALLON, ILL.

"But we moved to California when I was pretty young," Bill went on, "and while dad worked up to getting his own laboratory out here, mother taught school. I grew up with the idea of going into the chemical business with dad and I majored in science at Pasadena Junior College. I never did have the acting bug, but a friend of mine was producing one act plays in Pasadena and he had written a play called "Manya," an original about Madame Curie, and he asked me to do a bit part. The part had just ten lines and I was supposed to be an old, old man with long gray whiskers."

Bill was not only "supposed" to be an old man with long gray whiskers, he "was" that man as far as Milton Lewis, a Paramount talent scout, was concerned, and when the amateur production of "Manya" was restaged, by request, at the Pasadena Community Playhouse, Bill was picked right out of the cast and offered a contract with Paramount.

"I sat around for two months doing nothing but drawing my pay," Bill grinned, sort of apologetically, "and I was beginning to believe all the screwy things I had heard about the movies—you know, about how they give you a contract and then you get lost in the files and nobody thinks anything more about it until option time comes up and they say, 'Sorry, hope we haven't inconvenienced you, and all that stuff.'"

BUT before Bill's option came up, the little accident of being picked for "Golden Boy" happened and Bill was loaned to Columbia, and on the strength of that Warner's borrowed him for a juicy role with George Raft in "Invisible Stripes." But this time Paramount was beginning to wake up to the fact that this Holden boy had something, so they gave him the lead in "Those Were the Days" and before that was finished Producer Sol Lesser was bargaining with Paramount for a loanout of Bill for the romantic leading role in "Our Town."

By this time Bill was thoroughly dizzy and "Our Town" was only half finished for release through United Artists when Columbia Studios decided they wanted Bill again, this time for the leading man opposite Jean Arthur in "Arizona."

Six feet tall and weighing 165 pounds, "Golden Boy" Holden isn't the slightest bit interested in clothes and his wardrobe consists of three complete suits, a couple of odd pairs of pants and some sports coats.

JUST recently Bill sat down and argued with himself that with five leads in a little over a year, there was some indication that this movie business might be something of a permanent occupation for him. And, having come to that decision, he splurged himself to the extent of buying a new roadster and three rooms of furniture to put in a little apartment he rents in the Toluca Lake district.

"It's sort of nice," Bill grinned, "furnishing a place yourself, although it was really a tough job. I used all den-type of stuff, and it's bewildering trying to figure out just what sort of end table goes with a certain kind of lamp."

Occasionally now Bill invites a few of his friends in for ham and eggs. He says he's strictly a "skillet amateur" and so he usually lets any one of his guests that feels so inclined help out with the meal. There is one ban on these get-togethers, though. Bill won't let anybody talk movies.

"It's too easy to let people kid you into thinking you're better than you are," he explained seriously. "I'm not one of those people who shy away from their own pictures, but I mean it when I say that I'm not very impressed by myself on the screen. Gosh, if I got all the attention from the critics that I get from insurance agents, car salesmen and guys who want me to finance get-rich-quick schemes, I'd be happy."

Out here in Hollywood the gossips have it that Bill will marry Brenda Marshall before so very long, but Bill, himself, refuses to talk about it, just as he refuses to discuss the honor that was handed to him when he was chosen the ideal leap year date by the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority at UCLA.

"That," says Bill, "is something I wish you would allow me to blush about in the privacy of my own boudoir. And that, incidentally, is my only objection to the movies. A fellow just can't escape being made to feel foolish. Maybe it's a good thing I've worked as hard as I have the past year. If I got to thinking about a few of the things connected with this business, I'd hide myself in the privacy of dad's lab and never come out."

Tomorrow: The life and hard times of a beauty contest winner, named Jan Clayton, who says beauty is a drug on the movie market and that winning a hog calling contest is better publicity than being picked for your pulchritude.

Little Beauty Tricks

By Patricia Lindsay

IF your eyebrows invariably bleach in the sun try smoothing them down with white vaseline before you go to play out of doors winter or summer. The vaseline prevents them from bleaching just as oil prevents your skin from burning. They look sleek to boot.

Vaseline applied on lashes and brows before a swim is a good trick too for vaseline is water repellent. They will look long, dark and heavy when you emerge from the water.

HERE IS an astringent wash which corrects coarse pores, remedies oily skin and bleaches discolored skin. Apply with a sponge each night and morning on face and any part of the body. Cucumber juice one and one-half ounce, Tincture of Benzoine one-half ounce, cologne one ounce and elderflower water five ounces. Put the Tincture of Benzoine in an eight ounce bottle, add the other ingredients previously mixed and shake well.

IF YOUR HAIR is naturally curly dress it simply—don't strive for an elaborate coiffure. The beauty of your hair polished to a sheen through careful grooming is sufficient. Keep your complexion youthfully aglow and free of all blemishes and wear make-up to flatter your natural coloring.

NO WOMAN looks perfectly groomed if her hands are neglected. The skin should be soft and free of stains. The nails should be free of cuticle hangnails and the polish unchipped. With a little practice you can learn to change your polish in a jiffy. Fresh polish, evenly applied gives your hands a well-cared for look. It is important to use the "base" liquid of the same brand as your lacquer polish.

TO LOOK FRESH and perfectly groomed observe these rules of make-up: Keep your eyebrows trim by plucking the stragglers; touch the faded ends of your lashes with a little darkening; use a foundation cream or lotion to keep your make-up intact; match your powder to your current skin tone; wear no rouge during the daytime or just a speck artfully blended with your foundation cream; keep your lip outline even. Smeared lips ruin the beauty of many faces. See that your neck is powdered, too. Keep your hair tidy.

WITH ALL your beauty aids assembled at your dressing table, grooming is very much simplified. You can make your own dressing table if you haven't one. Begin with an ordinary table. Tack on a ruffled or pleated skirt and hang a mirror on the wall above or place a small standing mirror in the center of the table. Buy two cardboard cabinets with drawers and place under the skirt.

Does your skin need reconditioning? Write Miss Lindsay, care of the Post-Dispatch, your skin problem and she will advise you what to do. Inclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

ALL EYES TURN YOUR WAY

NOW and then a motor horn that has followed your dictates with the subservience of a slave will, for no apparent reason, go on the rampage and keep on blowing.

There is nothing so distracting as a horn that keeps on blowing when you do not want it to blow. Give the button a couple of resounding whacks to bring the horn to reason. It will continue to blow.

Get out of the car, lift the hood and investigate the mysteries of rods, wires and whatnot in the hope of tracing the blowing to its lair. The technicalities of automobile construction will baffle you. If you can find a stone or brickbat, bang it against the side of the engine. Mutter, "It ought not to do this." Nevertheless the horn does.

By this time heads will be poking out of windows and doors to see what the trouble is. Beads of perspiration will come out on your face and you will find yourself blushing to the roots of your hair. Get the car to a garage as quickly as possible, if, in your highly excited condition, you can recall where the nearest garage is.

Leap into the car and set off. All eyes will now be upon you, trying to figure out whether you are a newlywed, a fire engine, an acute appendix on the way to a hospital or a visiting screen celebrity. You must face the situation. Assume an attitude of dignity and indifference as though you did not hear the horn, or are accustomed to drive with your horn blowing. Forget that ordinarily you are a shy, unostentatious individual.

But don't be surprised if, after you have run the gantlet and suffered the derision and ridicule of your fellow-men and approach the haven of the garage, the horn, having had enough fun for one day, stops of its own accord.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

by WYNN

Thursday, Sept. 19.

Here is a day for weighing the future. Look keenly at the long distance effects of all plans and policies; leap not at present promises that call for too big payment later. Be particularly careful to preserve valuable emotional ties.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead encourages new outlook, changed opinions and changed plans, more training and education, travel if possible, if this is your birthday. Make more effort. Danger: Sept. 16-Oct. 5; Feb. 5-13; June 12-27, 1941.

Friday.

A rapidly moving day; be not stampeded, but move when convinced.

Economical Menus

By Meta Given

WHEN you think of a crisp green salad, or a luscious fruit salad, or a substantial meat or fish salad, you don't think very much about the dressing, but you wouldn't enjoy the salad without it. So although you can hardly say that the dressing is the most important part of the salad, it is certainly the crowning touch and as such deserves respectful consideration. A good French dressing is something every housewife should have in her repertoire: the sort that can be mixed up at a moment's notice and defies comparison with the commercial kind. Try this one, and if you like it, why not make it your own special dressing?

French Dressing.

One-half to one cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon dry mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon paprika, three-fourths cup salad oil, three-fourths cup vinegar, one-fourth cup water.

Mix dry ingredients (using more or less sugar according to preference). Add oil, vinegar and water and beat well. Serve well chilled. Shake vigorously or beat thoroughly just before serving. Makes one pint. Serve on head lettuce, shredded cabbage, celery cabbage, or other greens.

MENUS FOR THURSDAY.

Breakfast.

Cantaloupe wedges, one large cantaloupe; broiled bacon, one-half pound bacon; whole wheat toast, 10 slices bread; coffee, four tablespoons coffee (adults only); milk, for children.

Luncheon.

Grilled cheese sandwiches, 10 slices bread, butter, one-half pound cheese; head lettuce with French dressing, one head lettuce, French dressing recipe given above; fresh plums, five large plums; iced tea with lemon, two teaspoons tea (adults only), one-third lemon; milk for children.

Dinner.

Scrambled eggs with ham, six eggs, one-third cup milk, one-fourth cup ham, chopped; creamed potatoes, two pounds potatoes, two cups white sauce made with evaporated milk, one tablespoon minced onion, one teaspoon chopped pimiento; buttered peas, No. 2 tin peas, two tablespoons butter; cole slaw, one and one-half pounds cabbage, one-half cup dressing; bread and butter, 10 slices bread, butter; chilled watermelon, one-fourth large melon; coffee, four tablespoons coffee (adults only), milk for children.

Cost for day: About $1.70.

Don't Take My Word for It

By Frank Colby

Nape. A noun. The back part of the neck.

Nape is the surprise word of the week. The average speaker not only mispronounces the word as "nap," to rhyme with cap, but misuses it as well in the common expression "the nape of the neck."

Since the meaning of nape is "the back part of the neck," to use the expression "the nape of the neck" is to say literally: "The back part of the neck of the neck." Simply say: the nape.

The "a" in nape has the long sound (ay) as in ape, ape, tape. The word gape, frequently mispronounced "gap," must also rhyme with cape.

Correct pronunciations: NAYP, GAYP.

Question: Is it correct to speak of the window curtains as "drapes?" V. L. B.

Answer: "Drapes" is regarded as a colloquialism bordering on the vulgar, but it seems to have been so firmly established by long usage that the dictionaries may soon admit it to the ranks of legitimate words. In the meantime, draperies is much the better word.

(Capials indicate syllables to be accented.)

Baked Pears

Just as pleasing as baked apples and yet so often forgotten. Peel and cut into halves the large fall pears and lay side by side in a buttered pan. On each slice place a thin sliver of lemon. Cover with equal parts of water and molasses. Then put lid on dish and bake in a slow oven until tender.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE been deeply in love with a young man of 24 for some time. He was formerly married to a girl of 25, and they have been divorced about two months. This girl has a daughter 7 years old through a former marriage, and she lives in Illinois with her sister. Each time I mention marriage to this young man he says he can't marry till he earns the $500 he is supposed to give his former wife. I have offered this amount to him, but he will not accept it. He says he wants to earn it himself. Do you think if I gave her the money without his knowing it I would be doing the right thing? I love him very much and he is all a girl could want. He has a good car, a job and three beautiful rooms, but sometimes he threatens to sell his belongings and car, send what they bring to his wife, and join the Air Force. Do you think my nagging him is responsible for this? I don't mean to nag, I just want us to marry and be happy. We have talked about going to Kentucky after our marriage, but his parents object strongly to this. Do you think they are being fair in putting up objections as to where we shall live? STELLA.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply

You aren't giving this young man much breathing space, are you? Why not say nothing for a time and give the young man a chance to accumulate the necessary $500? Then he will feel free of all obligations connected with that first marriage, and free to start over. But if you keep on nagging you will defeat your own ends, and wake up some morning to discover he has flown off with the Air Forces, or fled to the Kentucky hills—without you. He shows his good sense by not accepting the money from you, for a real man does not take money from a woman. For you to present $500 to the ex-wife would simply mean she would be that much ahead, and you that much out, and would in no way help the situation, since the debt is the young man's, not yours. Be content to have your friendship a little more casual for a time, and allow the young man a little freedom in which to get his breath and get his life adjusted, unless you want to lose him. As to where you live when and if you marry, that is the concern of the couple involved and not of the parents of either one.

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE A GIRL FRIEND who comes often to my house, and we are very good pals. Usually my brother is home, and he always picks on her, but when he does, gets the worst of it. She fights back in self-defense. He is three years younger than she is and my mother thinks he is always right and blames everything on my girl friend. What can I do?

J. L.

While your mother is wrong in thinking the little brother is always right, still she should teach him that one does not quarrel with a guest, and he must learn good manners or stay away when his sister has company. On the other hand, the friend is not right either. Since she is three years older she should consider the source and remember that small boys are often most annoying, and ignore him. If a host should not quarrel with a guest, a guest should not forget her good manners, either.

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM 17 YEARS OLD. Am I too young to go on a date with a boy alone? Up to now I have always gone in crowds, but if a boy asks me for a date must I make it a double one? What is appropriate food for a wedding breakfast? My sister is to be married soon and her gown is to be white transparent velvet. What colors and materials will blend in with this? MARY G.

While it is usually more fun to go in groups or on foursomes when in the teens, an occasional single date makes for variety, and if your mother approves of the boy, it should be all right. Any pretty pastel color would be nice with your sister's velvet, if it is bridesmaids' dresses you are thinking of, and taffeta is always pretty. For your other question, I have a booklet called "What to Serve at Parties" which I will be glad to send for a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Meeting for Lunch

By Emily Post

ALTHOUGH it is awkward at times to ask someone, "Am I lunching with you, or are you lunching with me?" it may be the wiser thing to do, as for example in the circumstances cited following letter:

EMILY POST

"I telephoned Miss X—, a rather important friend of mine, asking to see her, so that I could ask her advice about some business. She suggested that I meet her at the Blank restaurant at noon on a definite day and that we could discuss things over lunch. But has she invited me, or can I still invite her to be my guest? And when shall I say something — when we meet, or when the time comes to pay? I am a young woman 25, and she is 50, in case that makes any differepce to your answer."

It seems to me that Miss X—knows your financial standing, and is intending to ask you to lunch with her. But I think it would be much better to say to her when you meet at the restaurant, "It is very kind of you to see me; I hope you are lunching with me." And if she says, "Oh, no, not at all. I expect you to lunch with me," say "Thank you, I'd love to." On the other hand, if you have no extra money and she does not ask you to lunch with her, it is best to say frankly, "I wish I could ask you to lunch, but I can't." Because of all embarrassing situations, the worst would be to have a restaurant check handed to you that you couldn't pay.

DEAR MRS. POST: Will you give your approval to the plan of a young woman just over 21 going to visit a young man in another town and state, and staying in the same rooming house? He has written that his landlady will act as chaperon, and that she is a person of unquestionable character and well thought of by everyone.

Answer: Taking it for granted that she is a person of unquestionable character, and that she will really assume the position of chaperon, it would be quite all right.

Song of Eight-Year-Old Twins Sounds the Keynote at Thriving Roman Catholic Mission Located in Community of 10,000 Negroes.

By Marguerite Martyn

A CONSPICUOUS spot of white looming up in South Kinloch Park, a community in the County populated by an estimated 10,000 Negroes, is Holy Angels Roman Catholic mission. Its neat white asbestos shingled buildings stand out in contrast to shabby surroundings where the most of the households are on relief. The Rev. Otto J. Moorman, S. J., pastor of the mission, is the only white man living in the entire community. Three Notre Dame nuns who come over from Wellston to teach in the parochial school, look so white in contrast to their black charges. But don't pity the white religious for the black spot in which their lot is cast. Father Moorman appears to live in a continual state of ecstasy over what his mission has accomplished and the nuns likewise exult in their work. A Negro teacher, Miss Marie Gordon, rejoices in the opportunity to utilize her real talents for music and art on behalf of her 51 first and second graders.

When Father Moorman came to take over this mission in October, 1929, it consisted of a chapel with nine communicants. Since then he has baptized 295. There were no living quarters for the priest. He rolled himself in a blanket and slept on the sacristy floor, as he had learned to do from the Indians of his previous mission in South Dakota. Now quite commodious living quarters and offices have been added to the back of the church.

The school which had two rooms and 49 pupils the first year has been enlarged to four rooms and to include a baby clinic in the basement. The school enrollment is 170 of whom 71 are Catholics. A pavilion whose roof covers a dining or audience space, a stage and well equipped kitchen for community social purposes, has just been completed. It will be used the first time for the annual chicken dinner and entertainment for white people Sunday, Sept. 29. Last year 500 guests were entertained. The aim is for 1000 this year to help defray debts for school books and the winter coal. Preparation of the dinner will be supervised by ladies from white parishes but the entertainment will be all by local talent and color. The entertainment will be well worth the price of the meal if I may judge only by some of the juvenile acts put on for me when I visited the school. Such mouth organ playing I never heard, nor more rhythmic tap and jitterbug dancing. And the songs! They ranged from "Old Adam" to, at Sister Alicette's suggestion, "something more peppy. Let's sing 'Oh, Johnny, Oh.'"

THE REV. OTTO J. MOORMAN, S. J., PASTOR OF THE MISSION.

THE MITCHELL TWINS . . .

SISTER ALICETTE AT WORK IN THE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

ONE VIEW THROUGH THE TREES OF THE HOLY ANGELS ROMAN CATHOLIC MISSION GROUNDS.

You must be sure to hear the Mitchell twins, Birdella and Gladys, aged 8, sing "The Mitchell humming birds are we, as happy as happy as can be, thank God Almighty!" It is a song composed by their mother and it goes on to extol in rhythm each member of the Mitchell family, mother, father and 11 children down to Harietta, 3 months old, who is identified as the drummer baby, and who, it is said, really does beat a drum in time to the song. All 13 members of the family live in a two-room house, but that does not prevent the mother from sending her children to school immaculately clean, nor from composing a song of pride and joy in her family. And how those children can swing that song!

Last and newest addition to the mission buildings, and unique in all the world, is a colored laymen's retreat house. It will be ready for dedication on the Feast of Christ the King, Oct. 29, eleventh anniversary of Father Moorman's coming to Holy Angels.

THE Society of Jesus, with missions all over the world and specializing in places of retreat where men and women may retire for a period to meditate in quiet, pray and refresh their souls, knows of no other retreat house planned expressly for Negro men. Nearly every retreat house has a chapel in a cave, because it was to a cave Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuit order 400 years ago, retired to resolve new religious convictions and adopt a way of life that led to his becoming a saint of the church. An artificial cave at this retreat house is especially realistic. A well known stone worker had impressions made in Cliff Cave on the Mississippi bluffs and reproduced to line the vaulted interior of this chapel. Exquisite masonry faces the cave. Overhanging vines and shrubbery atop the embankment further the effect of a natural cave in the side of a hill. Manresa, the name of the cave to which St. Ignatius retired, has been given to the retreat house. Said Father Monaghan, master of the celebrated retreat house for men south of St. Louis on the Mississippi, to Father Moorman, "Since my retreat is called the White House, yours might appropriately be known as the Black House." "Indeed, no," responded Father Moorman triumphantly. "We have chosen the name Manresa. We are that much ahead of you." Manresa retreat is set in a 100-foot square garden surrounded by a high stockade fence for privacy. A stone walled old oaken bucket well at one edge of the garden is the well upon which the mission depended for its water supply until just lately when connection with the county water system was finally achieved. A Way of the Cross with 14 stations is coming into being round the inside of the stockade. The grounds already are sodded and landscaped.

On the retreat house itself the donor (who prefers to remain anonymous) has spared nothing to make it a place of inspiration to Negro men.

"Everything about the place must be new," he announced at the outset, "because too generally Negroes have been expected to accept secondhand belongings of white people."

"We have all the essentials here that Father Monaghan has at his swanky White House," enthused Father Moorman, "except the river view. And we have Rebecca Gordon, my housekeeper, and an artist who is equal to painting a river scene as a backdrop if we should require it."

Sixteen bedrooms provide accommodations for 16 retreatants at a time. "Won't there be a stampede to enjoy this ease and comfort?" it was suggested, especially as payment for a three or four days' retreat is voluntary and retreatants are not required to be Catholics. Father Moorman anticipated no riots. "There will have to be limitations," he conceded, "as there are at the White House, where 22,000 members of its Retreat League must await their turns." He hopes other donors in wealthier parishes, who, like the zealous Catholic who financed the building appreciate that the Catholic church has been negligent about proselyting Negroes, and will come forward and endow rooms in the retreat house in case contributions from retreatants themselves fall to take care of overhead and upkeep.

"St. Joseph, the procurator of this colored mission, will take care of all that," declared Father Moorman confidently. "In God's providence that shrine to Our Lady"—he pointed to one shrine in the garden—"is standing on the spot where once I planted a small statue of St. Joseph that he might obtain this land for us."

IT WAS related how at that time the land back of the church belonged to a family who kept pigs and a radio; and how they would kick the pigs to make them squeal and turn on a loud broadcast during Father Moorman's sermons. The effort to establish a Catholic stronghold in a community in which there already existed 53 churches of opposing sects has been discouraging in more ways than one. When it was first proposed that a Catholic mission be started in Kinloch, "worldly men scoffed," recalled Father Moorman, "as worldly Romans once scoffed, 'Can any good come out of Nazareth?'"

Prejudices were first broken down when in the deepest of the depression a soup kitchen was set up in the basement of the church and 7000 meals were served to the hungry. That project was engineered by the same white friend of Negroes who has seen to the financing of both the school building and the retreat house. "He realized that prejudices feed on an empty stomach," remarked the priest.

"To be candid," Father Moorman added, "I said with my Master, 'Ye seek me because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled.' A fisher of men cannot catch many whales in a paganized, sectarian field. He must set his net for the minnows. Dear St. Joseph, through friends again, supplied the net, Holy Angel school was built. That net has been filled to breaking."

Then there came the free baby clinic, "which," the priest said, "more than anything else makes this solitary Catholic mission a 'City upon the mount.'"

It is served by the county health department two clinic days a month and 240 infants are regularly enrolled.

"The cooing, gurgling and wailing of that many infants, mingled with the fond crooning of the mothers," said the priest, "are reminders enough that, depression or no depression, Negro babes must live and be loved."

And now the handsome new retreat house, Father Moorman gleefully believes, will polish off racial and religious prejudices with a flourish.

"Love in the Sun"

By Elsie Robinson

HOW'D you like to get away from it all? Turn your back for keeps on the expensive fuss and frills, the fear and speed and pressure, the waste and bills, and wander off with only a few dollars, to make a fresh start in some quiet little village up some sunny little cove?

How'd you like to discover a dingy, tumble-down shack, half sunk in weeds, and gradually put it in shape, knocking down partitions, nailing up shelves, opening window and door to wind and sea and sun, feeling blood beginning to bubble in your tired flesh?

Would be grand, wouldn't it? Like being born again in a freer, happier world. And I'll wager that nine out of 10 of us cherish some such secret dream, think of it with a yearning choke as we toss sleepless at night.

Dain and the man she loved didn't merely cherish that dream, they went out and turned it into reality. Like many typical moderns, life had turned into a blind alley for both of them. Then, in a backwater, off the Cornish coast, he found a deserted, neglected shack which he could rent for a pittance a week. There was filth on floor and ceiling. The roof leaked like a sponge. The brook that trickled past the door was choked with slime and rubbish. Of modern conveniences, there wasn't a sliver. Neither blanket, bed nor chair, table or running water. Nor money to install them.

Could they possibly make a home of such mean beginnings? Yet they had to take a chance, somewhere. Thousands—millions — broken by the hopeless fear and futility of modern life were taking such chances, making good. Why shouldn't they? So he sent for her.

Leo Walmsley's book, "Love In the Sun," Doubleday Doran, publishers, tells the story of what came of that gamble. And lustier medicine for what ails America I have yet to meet. Here is all the courage of our pioneers coupled with the gaiety and ingenuity of our moderns. Here is triumph over the monotony, mediocrity and deadly menace of the machine age. These youngsters did not only raise and rescue themselves from the trap in which they were caught, they rescued life itself, restored its tang and beauty and healing mystery. And they did it all by methods which the dumbest or laziest laggard can employ.

That question of food. If you're a tired business man, whose only contact with diet is through some exorbitant grocery bill, you'll weep over it. And, chances are, tear your hair. For these young people, food came as it was intended to come, from soil and sea—without charge. That daily jaunt for eight-pound bass, mullet, masses of whitefish and schools of silvery mackerel. With the salt spray in their ruddy, laughing faces! And the ride home through the twilight—tired but content.

And there was the baby. The baby they had no logical reason to desire and every reason to fear. Yet the baby came, came while his frantic father fished interminably in the bay, seeing a great meteor hang and break, like a cry of joy, above his humble roof. "Any house where a baby is expected," he whispered to himself, "might be found to have a star of some sort shining over it."

"Love in the Sun," life as it was meant to be, with or without machines. Read this for the saving of your soul. A finer, more zestful book has yet to make the market.

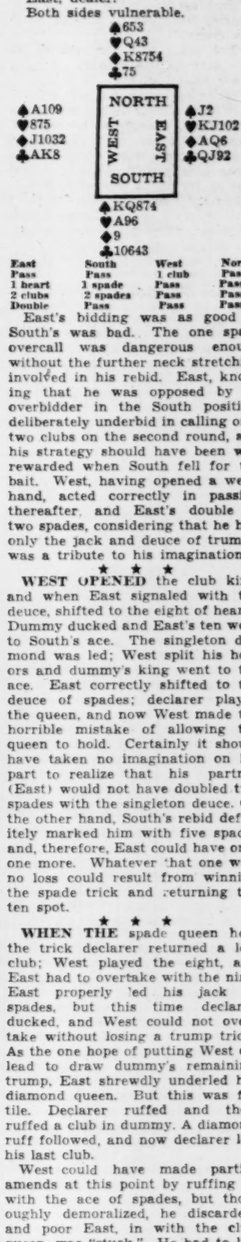
When Player Coyly Held Up His Ace

By Ely Culbertson

EXPERTS laugh up their sleeves at beginners for cashing aces and kings at their first opportunity, but I recently watched a hand in which the laugh was on the other side. A contract that should have been defeated four tricks, doubled, went down only two when the "expert" defender coyly held up his ace of trumps.

East, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 club	Pass
1 heart	1 spade	Pass	Pass
2 clubs	2 spades	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

East's bidding was as good as South's was bad. The one spade overcall was dangerous enough without the further neck stretching involved in his rebid. East, knowing that he was opposed by an overbidder in the South position, deliberately underbid in calling only two clubs on the second round, and his strategy should have been well rewarded when South fell for the bait. West, having opened a weak hand, acted correctly in passing thereafter, and East's double of two spades, considering that he had only the jack and deuce of trumps, was a tribute to his imagination.

WEST OPENED the club king, and when East signaled with the deuce, shifted to the eight of hearts. Dummy ducked and East's ten went to South's ace. The singleton diamond was led; West split his honors and dummy's king went to the ace. East correctly shifted to the deuce of spades; declarer played the queen, and now West made the horrible mistake of allowing the queen to hold. Certainly it should have taken no imagination on his part to realize that his partner (East) would not have doubled two spades with the singleton deuce. On the other hand, South's rebid definitely marked him with five spades and, therefore, East could have only one more. Whatever that one was, no loss could result from winning the spade trick and returning the ten spot.

WHEN THE spade queen held the trick declarer returned a low club; West played the eight, and East had to overtake with the nine. East properly led his jack of spades, but this time declarer ducked, and West could not overtake without losing a trump trick. As the one hope of putting West on lead to draw dummy's remaining trump, East shrewdly underled his diamond queen. But this was futile. Declarer ruffed and then ruffed a club in dummy. A diamond ruff followed, and now declarer led his last club.

West could have made partial amends at this point by ruffing in with the ace of spades, but thoroughly demoralized, he discarded, and poor East, in with the club queen, was "stuck." He had to lay down the king of hearts and give declarer the heart queen.

A penalty of 700 points had been transformed to one of 300 by West's miserable defense.

WEEP FOR LOVE

by RUBY M. AYRES

CHAPTER NINE.

ROY rounded the last bend of the drive in fine style and stopped at the front door.

His sister Barbara came running out to meet them.

"I quite expected he'd turn you out into the ditch or something," she informed Elizabeth. "He's so frightfully reckless."

"Reckless yourself!" her brother retorted disgustedly. "Has Lawless come?"

"Not yet. And I'm not at all sure that he will come."

Roy stared at her.

"What on earth do you mean?"

Barbara shrugged her shoulders.

"Nothing, except—well, at the dance the other night I thought he didn't seem keen about it. You know how people behave when they're trying to hedge politely."

Roy laughed.

"Rot! He'll come," he said confidently. "You're always imagining things. Hallo, mater!"

Mrs. Selby bent to kiss Elizabeth.

"I am delighted to see you," she said, and she drew the girl's hand through her arm. "Did you have a good run down? Did Roy drive carefully? But I'm sure he did."

"I'll take you up to your room," Barbara volunteered. "I hope you'll be able to find your way about this old barn. Has Roy told you about Bingo?" she asked laughingly.

"Yes."

"I believe it's just a fable," Barbara declared. "At any rate, we've never seen him. This way—down these two steps. I hope you'll like your room; it looks over the garden. By the way, may I call you Elizabeth?"

"Please."

"And you call me Barbara. I hate formality. Here we are."

She crossed the room with its low-raftered ceiling and pushed the window wide.

"It's a topping view," she said, with careless pride. "It's a bit misty now—heat, I suppose—but when it's clear you can see the hills—and a bit of the sea."

She was so bright and friendly that Elizabeth's heart warmed toward her as, for a moment, they stood together looking out over the old walled garden, with its beds of flaming flowers and mossy lawns.

Suddenly Barbara gave a little squeal.

"There's Kim—oh, I am glad he's come, after all!" She leaned out of the window and called to him shrilly.

Lawless, who had just stopped his car at the door, looked up and smiled; but Elizabeth drew back a little with a sudden unaccountable feeling of shyness.

"I'm so glad he's come," Barbara said again, joyfully. "He's such a lamb. I was dead nuts on him when I was in the nursery, and I've never got over it." She glanced at Elizabeth. "Of course, that was ages before he knew your sister," she apologized. "I can't understand why she chucked him."

"I don't know anything about it," Elizabeth said.

Barbara shrugged her shoulders.

"Neither do I. Kim never talks about her, of course, but she always seemed so frightfully happy when she was with him—not that I saw them together very much."

Poor Penelope! Elizabeth thought again, but she made no comment as they went downstairs together.

"Tea outside under the old apple tree," Roy informed them gaily. He gave his sister a little dig. "Who said Lawless wasn't coming?" he scoffed, raising his voice to call to his friend.

Lawless shook hands with Elizabeth. "What do you thing of High Chimneys?" he asked.

"I think it's beautiful."

"I think old places are a bit depressing myself," Barbara said cheerfully, "but I expect you'll love it."

"Why should she love it?" Roy asked.

Barbara laughed.

"Well, she looks a bit romantic," she answered. "There's a sort of fairy princess air about her." She waved a hand in vague explanation. "I'm sure she adores the Knights of the Round Table and all that, don't you, Elizabeth?"

Elizabeth flushed a little.

"Yes, I like the Knights of the Round Table."

"Lancelot the Unfaithful?" Lawless asked with a faint smile, but it was Barbara who answered calmly.

"I don't see how you could expect him to be anything else—entirely surrounded by lovely ladies as he was." She flung herself into a dramatic attitude, with outflung arms. "To love one maiden only, cling to her and worship her with years of faithful love," she quoted. "It sounds a bit dull to me."

"Really, Barbara!" her mother murmured.

"Not only dull, but impossible," Barbara insisted. "How can anyone know whether they are going to love the same person forever and ever and ever? Somebody else more attractive might so easily come along and then everyone would be in the cart. What do you say?" she demanded, turning to Elizabeth.

"I don't know much about it," Elizabeth said a little shyly. "But Penelope," and then she stopped in confusion, with a quick glance at vless, "says"——

"What does Penelope say?" Roy asked, but Elizabeth would not answer, and Mrs. Selby tactfully changed the conversation.

It was later on, when tea was over, that Elizabeth found herself alone with Kim Lawless. Roy had gone to put his car away, and Barbara had followed her mother into the house.

"Back in a minute, you two," she announced.

There was a little silence when she had gone till Lawless asked quietly:

"What did Penelope say?"

Elizabeth looked at him and away again.

"She said that she didn't believe in love—because it never lasts."

"And do you agree?" he asked.

She was silent for a moment, and then she said:

"I only know that it doesn't seem to last. People love someone and then quite suddenly they don't love them any more—but someone else instead." She drew a quick breath. "Yes, I think I agree with Penelope."

"Is it fair to judge everyone by one person's mistake?" Lawless asked.

Elizabeth answered rapidly:

"But it isn't only one person's mistake. I've seen it so often. There was my mother and father, and they were separated, and then mother and Pip—he was killed, and—and other people, too."

"I know you have had more than your share of unhappiness," Lawless said. "But that does not mean there is nothing better to come. I think we all find happiness—sooner or later."

"Find it—and then lose it," Elizabeth said. "And if it's going to be like that, I'd rather never have it at all."

He glanced at her serious face and smiled faintly.

"Don't be a pessimist," he said gently. "You're much too young—and too beautiful."

Her color rose a little.

"My mother was beautiful," she told him impulsively. "She was the loveliest—darlingest, but she wasn't happy—at least only for such a little while."

"But perhaps that little while made up for all the rest," Lawless said, and then he rose to his feet. "Come and look at the garden."

They turned into a narrow paved path bordered by a clipped yew hedge, and at the far end stood a mossgrown sundial with a weeping cupid.

There was an inscription round the column, but it was so worn away by time and weather that it was difficult to decipher.

"What does it say?" Elizabeth asked, and she bent closer to pick out the words.

"Love makes time pass away; time makes love pass away."

She read it aloud, and there was a moment of silence before she said with a faint note of bitterness, "There, you see! That's why there are so many pictures and sculptured figures of Cupid in tears."

She looked up at him and was surprised at the wistfulness of his expression.

"Don't believe it, Elizabeth," he said, and it was the first time he had called her by her Christian name. . . . "Don't believe it—at least, not the last part—because it isn't true. Love does last when—"

He stopped abruptly. Coloring a little as if afraid he had been too emotional.

SYNOPSIS:

Imposing Narrow Lane Hall depresses her but he ignores her request to live in his small house in London. While on a bus trip a year later, Elizabeth meets Kim Lawless whose wood she invaded to pick primroses despite a warning to trespassers. She likes him and he says he hopes she comes again. Derek dies, leaving Elizabeth half his wealth if she leaves Stella and lives with her Aunt Thornley. Her stepsister Penelope brings this news and can't understand her decision to remain with her mother. Penelope tells her she was to marry Kim Lawless but he broke the engagement. Stella dies suddenly and Elizabeth lives with her Aunt Thornley. She meets Lawless at the Selbys' dance. Roy Selby drives her to their place in Somerset for a holiday.

A Borrowed Book

Many people are very careless about a borrowed book, first, not taking the best care of it while reading and many times neglecting to return the book for months to its owner. Treat a book as you would a borrowed sum of money and return it as soon as possible. The owner is interested in the book if you are not.
